Nats Win, 1-0, As President, 31,000 View Initial Game

Newsom Struck by Ball, But Returns to Game to Beat Yankees.

Opening Day Sets Record for Capital

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Thirty-one thousand sets of vocal cords that had been clamoring for two hours for the license to set up that last triumphant clamor sounded as one in the ninth inning at Griffith Stadium yesterday—acclaiming Carl Reynolds' screaming two-base wallop to centerfield and the victory it brought to Washington.

That blow by Reynolds lifted the Nats to a 1-0 triumph over the Yankees in a rip-snorting ball game played to the greatest opening-day crowd in Washington's history, and it sealed for Buck Newsom a stirring victory over the Yankees' Lefty Gomez in a pitching duel that throbbed through nine innings.

President Roosevelt was there, with dignitaries flanking him on every side, but once the pre-game ceremonies had been concluded, the ball game yesterday belonged to Buck Newsom, the self-styled Whattaman of the Washington club.

Newsom had won that tremendous crowd back in the fourth inning when, half-crazed with the pain of being hit on the chin by a ball thrown across the diamond by Ossie Bluege, he reeled drunkenly all over the infield, staggered uncertainly to the bench and even while receiving the ministrations of the trainer, flung off his sweater and returned to the pitching box.

Back he came to hold the Yankees to four hits and shut 'em out, a great pitcher but a poor prophet. For he had predicted before the ball game that he would beat the Yankees by 5 to 1.

Day Is Newsom's.

Cecil Travis, who launched that ninth-inning onslaught with a single to rightfield; Carl Reynolds, who rifled that game-winning double to center; Lefty Gomez, who battled valiantly for the Yankees in holding Washington to seven hits—they were all lesser heroes. It was Newsom's day.

For four innings big Buck and the raging speed he put on the ball were unhittable. For four innings the only Yankee to reach base got there on an error by Cecil Travis. And then, at the start of the fifth, Travis fumbled again, this time on an easy roller off Bill Dickey's bat. At this point strategy called for a bunt by Ben Chapman, and, that done, the stadium presently was in an uproar.

The reliable Ossie Bluege fielded that bunt with the sure-handedness characteristic of him. Rushing in, he scooped the ball out of the dirt and cut it loose toward Joe Kuhel at first base in an effort to head off Chapman.

But that throw by Bluege never got past the pitching mound. Newsom, standing there, had forgotten to duck. With a sickening thud, the ball struck him flush on the right side of his face. Only raw courage held him on his feet. Clasping his hands to his face, in obvious pain, he staggered toward Bluege as if to inquire the reason for it all. Semi-delirious he reeled back across the field as the 31,000 sat or stood transfixed.

Newsom Won't Quit.

The ball meanwhile had caromed toward home plate where Joe Kuhel, whose first concern was the ball game, gathered it in and held the Yankees on their bases. Then, as the umpires called time, his teammates rushed to the aid of Newsom and escorted him from the field.

For five minutes the stadium was plunged in a sickening gloom casting prayerful looks at the Washington bench where Newsom was receiving treatment while reports of a fractured jaw swept through the stands.

Jack Russell was waved into the rightfield bullpen to prepare for emergency pitching duty and Newsom apparently was out of the game, when there came a great cleavage in the crowd that had gathered in front of the dugout.

With a curse at his luck, Newsom bounded out of the hands of Trainer Mike Martin, elbowed his way through solicitous fans and teammates and literally ran back there to the mound, rubbing his chin ruefully but determined to get back in the ball game.

And at that, the 31,000 stood as one. President Roosevelt, in his box

Eden to Combat Paris' Coolness In Africa Crisis

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, April 14.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden wrestled tonight with one of the gravest dilemmas British foreign policy has faced since the World War.

He must go to Geneva tomorrow to face disintegration of the sanctionist front against Italy, further defiance of the League of Nations by Premier Benito Mussolini and possibility that France, angered by British failure to help bring Chancellor Adolf Hitler to book, may desert Eden's policies in the Italo-Ethiopian war.

Following conversations with Eden, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin secretly enlisted the active assistance of Lord Tyrrell, former ambassador to Paris and a leading member in Britain's confidential foreign affairs "brain trust."

The extent of Britain's quandary became apparent when a spokesman said the government's efforts will be devoted to achieving Italo-Ethiopina conciliation.

Badoglio to Press Drive.

Simultaneously an Italian spokesman gave assurance that Marshal Pietro Badoglio, Italian supreme commander in East Africa, would continue to drive his armies until Ethiopia has been smashed into submission.

These facts were outstanding as Anglo-Italian tension reached its most acute stage since the British fleet was concentrated in the Mediterranean last September:

1. The sanctionist front at Geneva appeared to be wavering.

2. The Italian flag flapped in the breeze over Lake Tana, British sphere of influence in Ethiopia, and British and Italian troops were separated only by a dry river bed at Gallabat, on the Ethiopian Sudanese frontier.

3. Anglo-French differences became glaring with France insisting Britain has a frown for Italy, and a smile for Germany.

It was rumored that France, making another adroit diplomatic move, asked firm British guarantees of Austria's frontiers as the price for French co-operation in firmer action against Italy.

Differences In Cabinet.

Eden faced differences among his own cabinet colleagues. Many believed that the sanctionist policy against Italy has failed and that it would be futile to apply oil sanctions as an additional penalty since Italy is well-stocked with petroleum.

A majority of cabinet ministers were represented as believing that unanimity for military sanctions against Italy could not be obtained. Further, opposing Eden as an avowed sanctionist, they were not inclined to agree to single-handed British action, which might precipitate an Anglo-Italian naval war in the Mediterranean.

When the League Committee of Thirteen convenes at Geneva Thursday to consider what progress has been made in attempts to negotiate peace in East Africa, Eden will be confronted with the difficulty involved in maintaining strong League control over peace talks.

Tyrrell, it is understood, has advised Baldwin that Britain should concentrate her diplomatic efforts on ascertaining the possibilities of an Italo-Ethiopian peace and avoid any armed or other provocation which might prejudice international relationships in Europe. Many believed that Tyrrell, who does not see eye to eye with

Alexandria's Soot War Delays Permit for Power Plant Annex

Alexandria's "foreign legion"—that growing army of families that has moved into the historic city in recent years—last night won its first skirmish in the battle to rid the southeast water-front section of the town of smoke and soot.

John W. Howard, manager of the Virginia Public Service Co., which operates the power plant responsible for the smoke, appeared before the city council last night. He asked for a permit to erect a $500,000 annex to the plant.

Representatives of the "foreign legion," convinced that the company is not planning to install a modern plant with proper equipment for smoke abatement, were at the meeting to protest the granting of a permit without a thorough investigation.

The city council, much to their satisfaction, appointed a committee of five to make such an investigation. The five are City Manager Emmett C. Dunn, City Engineer H. G. McCarthey and Councilmen Louis C. Barley, John D. Matter and Dr. John T. Ashton. They were instructed to obtain from the power company data on the design, the construction and all other aspects of the proposed plant.

Meantime action on the permit will be delayed.

F. A. Silcox, chief of the United States Forest Service, told the council that the electric rate in Alexandria is 7.5 cents a kilowatt hour, almost double the Washington rate of 3.9.

The Alexandria plant, he pointed out, is controlled by H. C. Hopson's Associated Gas & Electric Co., giant New York holding concern.

Bill Providing Site for Airport Finally Passed

Nine-Man Commission for Selecting Ground Approved by House.

The way was paved yesterday for the early appointment of a commission to select a site for a District-Federal airport.

Culminating more than a year's intensive legislative efforts and a decade of controversy, the House adopted the second conference report setting up a 9-man commission and authorizing an initial appropriation of $10,000 for technical services.

The report was adopted without debate upon motion of Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, chief of the House conferees. It was adopted by the Senate last week.

Speaker to Name Three.

After the amended bill is signed by the President, the commission members will be appointed and will launch an immediate investigation with the aim of reporting its findings to Congress before adjournment, if possible.

Three Senators will be named by the Vice President. They are expected to be Senators King (Democrta), of Utah; Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont.

The Speaker of the House will name three members of the House. His appointments are expected to be Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee; Representatives Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and either Representativ Dirksen, of Illinois, or Cole, of New York, as the minority member.

The other three members will be appointed by the President, but probably upon the advice of the six members of Congress. One of these is expected to be a District Commissioner.

While it is doubtful whether the commission will be able to make its recommendation as to an airport site in time to obtain an appropriation for purchase and construction this year, conferees believe the re-

Professors in Government Linked to Communists by Father Walsh.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 14.—Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, charged tonight that "a certain type of professor" in Federal Government offices was allied with Communists in a conspiracy against Christianity.

The Washington educator spoke before some 2,000 Catholic school executives and clergymen assembled at a banquet session of the three-day convention of the National Catholic Education Association.

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith canceled arrangements to act as toastmaster when he incurred an illness described by his offices as "a slight cold."

Dr. Walsh said machine age influence upon education had produced "intellectual indigestion, perverted taste, and a jaundiced eye," and paved the way for "the subtle propagandist with his alien program of social discontent and world revolt directed against the principle of authority, against Christianity, against the democratic ideal.

Assails Professors.

"He is aided, abetted and comforted in that sinister campaign by a certain type of professor who prostitutes academic freedom to an unacademic conspiracy against the very foundations of Chistian morality; who grossly violates the inherent right of students to command reverence for religious convictions; who undermines respect for the traditions of free government by subtle innuendoes against the Constitution in defense of atheistic communism and who advances class hatred by a sneering and superior attitude toward those inferior breeds outside his caste who dare to dissent from his self-decreed infallibility.

"Those who live in Washington have observed the intolerance and illiberality of such mandarins when transplanted to positions in the Government and clothed with brief authority.

"There is still a remnant of them rushing from department to department, each with a dictator's baton in his briefcase, hoping and planning and scheming for enlarged but centralized power. There is the potential termite in the house of academic freedom."

The Rev. George Johnson, of the Catholic University of America, said that refusal of government to permit Catholics to use their public school tax payments to support parochial schools constituted a limitation upon religious freedom.

Father Johnson, secretary-general of the association, said members of the church had accepted "bravely and generously" this situation requiring them to raise other money for their own institutions, but "do

Future War Veterans Invited To 'Open House' of Legion Here

In a telegram to the national commander of the Veterans of Future Wars, Victory Post, No. 4, of the American Legion last night invited the future veterans to an "open house" here May 5.

In forwarding the invitation, the American Legion offered to provide transportation for "wounded and psychopathic cases" among the future veterans and gave assurance that "a corps of nurses would be in attendance" throughout.

Entertainment, Victory Post officers said, would be provided by "Mademoiselle from Bar-le-Duc." The mademoiselle, they said, would sing "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier."

The legion stipulated that members of the future veterans who accept their invitation must abide by regulations they have made for the affair. "All saxophones and ukeleles," they said, "must be checked at the door, as instruments of torture are not allowed in civilized warfare." The legion refuses to accept responsibility for "lost coonskin coats."

Bill to Block Stock 'Gifts' Avoiding Tax

Corporations Must Pay Levy as if No Dividend Had Been Made.

By Robert C. Albright.

Corporation tax avoidance, by means of stock dividend distribution to shareholders, will be blocked in the tax bill draft now being prepared for the Ways and Means tax sub-committee, Chairman Samuel B. Hill declared last night.

Conceding that true stock dividends can not be taxed in the hands of shareholders, Represetnative Hill, outstanding House authority on taxation, said corporations themselves distributing stock in lieu of cash, will be taxed as if they had made no distribution whatsoever.

Hill's statement followed a seeming impasse reached in the sub-committee last week on how to plug tremendous revenue leakage likely to result from corporations retaining all earnings by distributing stock dividends instead. The theory had been advanced during hearings that a corporation could retain its earnings tax-free by distributing stock to shareholders in the amount of earnings.

Cites Court Ruling.

In asserting that earnings retained are still subject to the proposed corporation tax, regardless of whether stock dividends have been issued against them, Representative Hill referred to the Supreme Court decision, Eisener vs. Macomber, which held that stock dividends do not increase a shareholders' income, and therefore could not be taxed as income.

"If it is true that a corporation has not increased a shareholder's holdings by distributing stock dividends," Hill said, "it follows that if no taxable distribution has been made, the earnings retained are still subject to the proposed tax."

Chairman Hill's interpretation of a point that many observers believed was the one loophole in the program likely to diminish revenues to the vanishing point if taken full advantage of, ex- legislative draftsmen struggled to prepare the Administration's tax program in bill form in time for a meeting of the committee tomorrow.

Serious Drop Feared.

Revenue uncertainties have been a chief concern of the sub-committee ever since it was discovered that delayed declaration of even cash dividends would throw them over into the next income year, resulting in a year's lag in a substantial volume of revenue. When the committee found it could not tax stock dividends, fears were advanced that another serious revenue drop would be experienced.

The Administration's new corporate tax "reform" as drafted by the sub-committee, would tax a corporation in proportion to the amount of earnings withheld from distribution. As advanced by the President, the idea was to force corporations to distribute earnings to stockholders. For example, if a corporation refused to make any distribution, it would be taxed at the maximum rate of 47½ per cent. If, on the other hand, it distributed all of its earnings, it would not pay any tax. Money so distributed would be subject to both normal and surtax levies when it reached the stockholder.

Thus, were it permissable under the law for corporations to distribute stock dividends and get credit for distributing earnings, both the corporations and the stockholders would escape the tax, in view of the Eisner vs. Macomber decision.

It is Hill's view, however, that the decision works two ways. If by paying shareholders in stock dividends the corporation has not increased the income of the shareholder, the court's decision can be construed to mean that the corporation has not distributed any taxable assets, and is hence subject to the full application of the new earnings tax at the source, he contends.

Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, which has held no hearings on the bill, plans to get his group under way as soon as the Hill sub-committee draft is approved by the Ways and Means Committee and reported to the House, perhaps early next week.

The Administration is expected to make an effort in the Senate to revive $221,000,000 in processing taxes sidetracked by the House, while an effort will be made by independent Democrats to retain the present corporation income tax.

New Deal Enemies Denounce Roosevelt Proposals for Idle

Hoover Offers Program to Put Capital to Work, As Alternate.

By Felix Bruner.

New Deal opponents yesterday seized upon President Roosevelt's speech at Baltimore Monday night as an occasion for a barrage of criticism, charging that he evaded vital issues, that he offered nothing but a makeshift program, and that his proposals would lead to disaster.

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher, of the Republican National Committee, declared that "all President Roosevelt was able to offer the youth of the country was the prospect of continued service in CCC camps or WPA labor crews."

Former President Hoover said he believed shorter working hours as advocated by the President for increasing employment "a most desirable end," but that it had failed two years ago as an emergency measure. He said the proposal for limited age of workers would probably not take up 10 per cent of present unemployment.

In a statement at his home in Palo Alto, Calif., according to the Associated Press, the former President suggested a plan of putting long term capital to work as a means of providing employment.

Representative Chester C. Bolton, of Ohio, chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, asserted that the President "skirted or evaded the problems of taxation, Federal squandering and political boondoggling."

Jouett Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, inquired how Mr. Roosevelt proposes to carry out his suggestion that hours of work be shortened and wages be maintained. He pointed to the Supreme Court decision outlawing the NRA.

CHESTER C. BOLTON.

James A. Reed, former Democratic Senator from Missouri, charged in a speech that the President is speeding the United States "toward the swamps and morasses of communism, bolshevism and fascism."

Fletcher insisted that the youth of the country looks for assurance for the future and "he gave them only empty promises and neglected to mention the tax burden he is piling on their backs."

"It must have been a disappointment to hear this siren song of the great experimenter, with his talk

Democratic Vote Sets New Record

Yesterday at the Polls

Frank Knox, with about two-fifths of the precincts reported, had a majority of 59,000 votes over Senator William E. Borah in Illinois' preferential primary for Republican Presidential nomination, Knox running strongly ahead in Chicago, but trailing the Idahoan down-State.

Gov. Henry Horner appeared on the way to victory in his fight for renomination against the Chicago Democratic machine and Dr. Herman Bundesen.

Otis Glenn was an easy victor as Illinois' Republican Senatorial nominee, while Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, Democrat, was renominated without trouble.

C. Wayland Brooks won the Republican gubernatorial nomination in Illinois, greatly out-distancing six rivals.

In Nebraska an unexpected write-in movement developed in behalf of Gov. Alf M. Landon's Presidential aspirations, while an expected write-in movement in support of renomiantion of Senator George W. Norris developed but slightly.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 15 (Wednesday). In a race closely watched for possible indications of Midwestern trends, Col. Frank Knox maintained a 59,000-vote lead over Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, this morning in their contest for the Presidential preference vote in Illinois Republicans.

Given a heavy majority in Cook County (Chicago) the publisher, one of the early critics of the New Deal, saw an early advantage down-State transformed into a 2,174 majority for his rival when about a tenth of the returns from that section were counted.

In 3088 precincts of the State's 7,426 Knox had 182,472 votes to 123,410 for Borah. In 468 downstate precincts Borah's vote was 33,103 and Knox's, 30,929.

While the Borah-Knox contest claimed greatest national interest, the no-quarter struggle between Gov. Henry Horner and Dr. Herman N. Bundesen for the Democratic Gubernational nomination was credited for a large hand in stimulating the outpouring of voters toward new high marks.

1,500,000 Cast Votes.

Their race, aided by a perfect spring day, was estimated to have brought out nearly 1,500,000 voters in the State, nearly a million in Cook County for a new high total. The State Republican vote was estimated at 1,132,000.

The Horner-Bundesen battle, with Bundesen in the front in Cook County but trailing down-State, attracted a heavier vote than that given the unopposed preference candidacy of President Roosevelt. With 3,173 precincts counted, including 702 down-State, Budesen, backed by Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago and National Committeeman Patrick Nash, had a lead of around 58,000. The vote: Budesen, 394,502; Horner, 326,274. Down-State, Horner had a 52,000 lead in the 702 precincts, polling 73,505 votes, compared with 21,550 for Bundesen. There are 3,750 down-State precincts.

Roosevelt Gets Early Lead.

In 185 Cook County precincts, President Roosevelt received 33,341 ballots to 36,092 cast in the Democratic Governorship fracas. Little in the way of a comparison between the President's total and the combined Knox-Borah vote was available, though early counts gave the Chief Executive big leads.

In the seven-entrant race for the Republican nomination for Governor, C. Wayland Brooks pulled far in the lead in early returns with former Gov. Small running in second place. The vote from 2,784 precincts, mostly in Cook County, where Brooks is a resident, was: Brooks, 193,184; Small, 65,520.

For the Democratic senatorial nomination, J. Hamilton Lewis, the incumbent, appeared to be experiencing no trouble from his two opponents, Ruth McNamara and Clarence H. Kavanaugh. Neither was widely known in the State. The Senator made no campaign.

Brook, a veteran of two previous

Inquiry Links Strike-Breaking To Arms Firm

2 Liberty League Lawyers Also Connected With Industrial Strife.

By the Associated Press.

Strike-breaking agencies, a firm supplying arms to industry and two Liberty League lawyers were linked in testimony yesterday before a Senate committee.

"The connection is a bit too close for comfort," Heber Blankenhorn, labor relations board investigator, told the labor sub-committee headed by Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin.

He said W. W. Groves, president of the Railway Audit & Inspection Co., also was a director of Federal Laboratories, Inc. The Railway Audit & Inspection Co. supplied strikebreakers and labor spies to numerous industries, he said, while the Federal Laboratories supplied "tear gas, nausea gas, submachine guns, pistols, gas guns, billies and armored cars."

Steel Counsel Named.

Among the other directors of the munitions supply firm, Blankenhorn said, was Roy G. Bostwick, a law partner of Earl F. Reed. Blankenhorn said Reed was counsel for the Weirton Steel Corporation and chairman of the Liberty League lawyers' sub-committee that drafted the voluntary opinion holding that the Wagner labor disputes act was unconstitutional.

Blankenhorn also told the committee that the H. C. Frick Coke Co., a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, had employed the Central Industrial Service, an affiliate of the Railway Audit & Inspection Co. He said Raoul Desvernine, chairman of the Liberty League lawyers' committee, was

Pan-American Unity for Peace Urged by Hull

Speaks at Union Dinner; Foreign Policy Group Criticizes Trujillo.

Unity of the 21 nations of the Americas "to banish forever the scourge of war from this hemisphere" was asked by Secretary of State Cordell Hull last night at the Pan-American Union.

Speaking to a brilliant gathering of diplomatic, social and official leaders, assembled in the union's white marble building to hail the sixth annual observance of Pan-American Day, Secretary Hull made a straightaway plea for "friendly co-operation and enlightened internationalism."

He cited the "long record of settlement" of international disputes on the American continent "by conciliation, mediation and arbitration," proclaiming this to be the "greatest contribution of the New World to the conduct of international affairs."

With Pan-American Day unusually significant this year, as intensive preparations are made here and throughout the other American capitals for this summer's inter-American peace conference at Buenos Aires, the audience listened with particular interest to the Secretary's exposition. He discussed the "steps to bring about economic rehabilitation," which he stressed as important to "the maintenance of that international good feeling and co-operation which is essential for the maintenance of peace."

While Hill, as chairman of the

Hagood at Chicago To Take Two Jobs

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 14.—Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, restored to active service yesterday after being suspended for criticizing WPA, arrived tonight to take up his new post and announced he would act as an "efficiency engineer" for a mail order house in addition to his army duties.

Hagood will take command of the Sixth Corps Army with headquarters here May 2, and his business association with Sears, Roebuck & Co. will not, he said, "in the remotest manner be connected with the Army."

In a statement Hagood, whose temporary suspension from command of the Eighth Corps Area at San Antonio, Tex., came after he referred to WPA funds as "stage money," said:

"I have been employed by them to do some consulting work of temporary nature. * * * There is nothing in this work which is inconsistent with my work as an officer on the active list of the Army, and during my recent conferences in Washington with the President, with the Secretary of War, and with Gen. Craig (Chief of Staff), I made it known to them."

Hope for 3 Buried in Mine Abandoned by Rescue Party

By the Associated Press.

Moose River, N. S., April 15—(Wednesday) (AP).—Mining experts virtually abandoned hope early today for the rescue of three men imprisoned 140-feet below the surface in the Moose River gold mine.

Work was halted after a second cave-in blocked one possible entrance to the underground prison and electric mining machines were started digging an entirely new shaft.

The experts said it would be 3 or 4 days before the shaft could reach the three men—Dr. D. E. Robertson, widely known surgeon; his mining partner, Herman R. Magill, and their timekeeper, Charles Alfred Scadding.

The men have been held below since the first cave-in Sunday. The rescue workers do not know whether the trio below is alive or not.

The old shaft, the experts declared, is unsafe and in danger of falling in after the second cave-in. Huge fissures threaten further slides.

Mining equipment, including a big crane, was being brought here by special train from Halifax last night. The train will take the equipment to Musquidoboit, the railway station nearest here, but the rest of the 75-mile trip will have to be made over rough country roads, weakened by rains and thaw.

Only a few of the 100 workers, carrying on in shifts, had been able to dig at one time in the narrow shaft over which a tripod has been erected to pull up rock and earth dug from the passage.

House Leaders Move to Block PWA Aid Fund

Administration Democrats moved quickly yesterday to block attempts of a group in the House to earmark $700,000,000 of the proposed $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation for the Public Works administrator. Secretary Ickes, PWA head, insisted that he had nothing to do with the movement.

In spite of opposition, Representative Beiter (Democrat), New York, leader of the PWA bloc, said 75 House members already had signed petitions asking for earmarking of relief funds, and predicted that the number would reach 300.

Majority members of the committee appeared determined to report a bill providing the entire amount should go to the Works Progress Administration, headed by Harry L. Hopkins.

Sentiment Grows.

At the same time, sentiment was growing for distribution of relief funds among the States and for the ending of Federal relief. This proposal is being made by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and supported by a number of other Republican leaders.

The plan would call for Federal funds sufficient only for food, shelter and clothing. If States and cities wished to use the money for public works, they could provide necessary additional amounts.

Ickes, disclaiming responsibility for the PWA move in Congress, at the same time announced that under the old appropriation his organization spent only $741 per year per man employed. This represented, however, only 30 per cent of the cost of projects, the remainder being provided by cities and States.

Denies Talking to Members.

"I want to make it absolutely clear," the Interior Secretary said, "that I haven't even talked to any member of Congress and have nothing to do with any pending bill. I think we ought to follow the President's policy on relief."

Meanwhile, in the Senate, the Audit and Control Committee still showed no intention of reporting the Davis resolution calling for an investigation. The Committee on Campaign Expenditures, empowered to investigate use of relief money in politics, was packed with New Deal sympathizers.

Vice President Garner announced the following Senators would serve on the committee: Lonergan (Democrat), Connecticut, chairman; Minton (Democrat), Indiana; Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington; Austin (Republican), Vermont, and La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin. Austin is the only New Deal opponent on the committee.

Meanwhile, discontent with the present WPA system of work relief, and desire for a program of social insurance such as now obtains in England, was voiced yesterday before a sub-committee of the Senate Education and Labor Committee, now considering the Frazier-Lundeen $5,000,000,000 social insurance plan.

Lurie, Epstein Testify.

Witnesses included Harry Lurie, director of the Social Service Association; Abraham Epstein, long-time executive secretary of the American Association for Social Security, and E. S. Broadus, associate professor of political economy at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.

Epstein told the committee the present system of work relief is "vastly more expensive," and "more destructive to morale," than would be a social insurance program comparable in effectiveness.

Prof. Broadus told the committee that the American productive system is capable of being speeded up to provide $135,000,000,000 annually, whereas it now produces less than half that much. He said he believed that after the first "impact" of the $5,000,000,000 taken from the economic system had been survived, thereafter the program could be easily financed from the constant and increasing prosperity of the country.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, chairman of the committee, announced Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the United Textile Workers, would testify today.

One Dead in Riot Of Polish Jobless

Warsaw, April 14 (Polish Telegraphic Agency).—Reports received here tonight from Lwow stated one person had been killed and another seriously injured in riots of unemployed workmen.

The dispatches said a large group of unemployed persons gathered in front of the state employment office and demanded immediate work. When they were told that the state labor fund was not sufficient to satisfy their demands they marched to a neighboring square, where the demonstrators attacked mounted police. One policeman shot two of the agitators, one of whom died later in a hospital. A large detachment of police finally dispersed the rioters.

President Fails to 'Click' in Baltimore Address; Audience Not Swayed By His Histrionics.

By Franklyn Waltman

NOT only did President Roosevelt pitch a wild one in tossing out the ball in the game between the Washington Nationals and the New York Yankees, inaugurating the American baseball season, but he pitched a wild one in his Baltimore speech opening his re-election campaign.

WALTMAN

New Deal editorial writers may praise that address as a great political speech; commentators, writing from Washington, may assert that Mr. Roosevelt still packs a wallop which stirs the national consciousness.

But we were there and obviously there was something wrong with the President's speech. Perhaps it sounded better on the radio than it did in the Baltimore Armory; perhaps it did thrill the Nation. But it did not stir the audience of 15,000 to 18,000 Democrats sitting before the President; and that, we submit, is the test of a good political speech.

There were cheers, of course; a mighty wave of cheering when he mounted the platform. But the applause during the speech seldom rose above a ripple and at no time reached the enthusiasm which one who has traveled with the President since the 1932 campaign had come to expect. And from the expression on his face when he concluded, we suspect that Mr. Roosevelt realized he had failed to establish that sympathetic bond with his audience so usually the result of his oratorical efforts.

The fault did not seem to lie with Mr. Roosevelt's platform technique. He flashed his smile constantly. Indeed, as his audience grew cold and clammy on him, he intensified his usual efforts at histrionics, now simulating solemnity; then striking a light, playful role—raising his voice from a basso to the high-pitch of an evangelist.

One suggestion, coming from a New Deal idolator—who conceded that the performance as a political show was sour—placed the blame on the audience. He thought the audience did not arise to the occasion, possibly because the spirit of Albert C. Ritchie, whose picture adorned the first page of the program, still hovered over Baltimore.

But such suggestions are indulged in only by ham actors who have stirred their audiences to vegetable throwing. Their excuse usually is that the audience lacks the ability to understand them. It is hardly a fit excuse for what happened in Baltimore Monday night, for it is the business of a political orator to carry his audience with him.

And this audience patently wished to be carried off its feet. The fact that they were there indicated they were Roosevelt Democrats—and most of them had even witnessed or participated in an old-fashioned Democratic torchlight parade before the meeting to pep them up. They wanted to cheer Franklin Roosevelt—but something slipped. The inspiration to pull them to their feet was lacking and they were disappointed.

So what was it? Well, it must have been the text of the President's speech which threw a wet blanket on this meeting. In the first place, the President, in preparing his speech, addressed it as though it were to be delivered at a CCC camp or a meeting of unemployed youths.

Many in his audience had gray hairs, and while men and women between 25 and 40 years of age predominated, most of them were on their way to success as young physicians, lawyers and businessmen—sitting there in dinner jackets, with their lovely young wives in expensive evening gowns. In that respect, the President missed his cue entirely.

Aside from the fact that several of Baltimore's major Democratic leaders confided that they thought the speech was without substance—one subsequently termed it a "sermon" and said he could not remember anything specific that had been said—the address was poor political strategy because Baltimore is a conservative city, with a faith in a stabilized currency, a liberal foreign trade policy and well-ordered public finances.

Mr. Roosevelt's sneers at such objectives as "panaceas" obviously did not sit well with that audience. Despite added histrionics during that part of the speech, the audience sat silent. Obviously they did not think a stabilized currency based on gold and a balanced budget were nearly as funny as apparently the President did.

Incidentally, a month ago before the same kind of audience in Baltimore, Secretary of State Hull received a big hand when he cited the necessity for a stabilization of international currencies and a balancing of the Federal budget.

And when the meeting was over an astute and thoroughly informed Democratic leader in Baltimore declared privately that Maryland was no less doubtful in this year's election than it has been for several months. Indeed, the President's visit may have made the situation worse from a Democratic viewpoint, since the meeting was staged by "Young Democrats" without consulting any of the regular organization leaders and they feel some resentment over this slight.

And the use, by these "Young Democrats," of Regular Army troops in the torchlight parade has supplied Mr. Roosevelt's opponents with some colorful material to use in comparing him with Hitler or Mussolini—marching into town to speak with his troops preceding him. The speech itself was reminiscent of the oratorical style of those two dictators.

* * *

Yes, Mr. Roosevelt's first re-election campaign speech was as wild a pitch as the one he made at the ball park yesterday. His pitching arm seems to need some massaging by a Charlie Michelson or a Jim Farley.

Ship Owners Sever Union Relations

San Francisco, April 14 (U.P.).—Ship owners struck boldly tonight to cut through a snarl of labor troubles by severing relations with the San Francisco local of the International Longshoremen's Association.

After a day of futile, angry conferences over the issue of handling cargo from the Grace liner Santa Rosa, declared "unfair" by the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, the Waterfront Employers Association announced the drastic move.

Their decision culminated three years of bickering, fighting and "quickie" strikes in which charges have ranged from murder and mutiny to labor union smashing campaigns.

German Army Leader In Belgian Drive Dies

Halle, Germany, April 14 (A.P.).—Gen. Max von Bahrfeldt, 80, commander of the Germany army in its march through Belgium in 1914, died today.

Gen. von Bahrfeldt was sentenced to death "in absentia" by a Belgian court martial for alleged atrocities. He was a noted authority on numismatics and was a member of the Numismatics Society of New York.

Labor, Industry Join to Launch Silicosis Drive

Parley Here, Called by Miss Perkins, Plans Compensation Laws.

A concerted drive by employers and labor to include silicosis as one of the occupational diseases to be covered by state compensation laws, and to end the activities of shyster lawyers and quack doctors preying on the fears of workers engaged in "dusty" industries, was forecast yesterday at the National Silicosis Conference in the auditorium of the Labor Building.

The conference of labor leaders, employers, medical experts and engineers was called by Secretary of Labor Perkins to devise a national program for silicosis prevention and to avert the recurrence of the recent tragedy in West Virginia where scores of tunnel drill-workers died or were disabled by inhaling the fine silica particles.

The need of allaying the silicosis panic of workers in "dusty" industries was urged by virtually all the speakers.

Cites Baseless Fear.

"A conviction has been created in many workmen's minds that they have been exposed to silica dust and are, perhaps, affected by a fatal malady," pointed out John P. Frey, president of the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor. "Incompetent physicians have not relieved this belief. As a result men not afflicted, and their families, are overwhelmed by alarm. They are in much the agonized frame of mind as those bitten by a mad dog before Louis Pasteur had discovered the specific for rabies."

An occupational disease act such as is in force in England, where silicosis is included, would eliminate most of the thousands of actions for damages by "ambulance-chasing lawyers," asserted Alfred C. Hirth, of the Air Hygiene Foundation of America, in presenting the employers' viewpoint.

Hits Shyster Lawyers.

"The shyster lawyer will foment litigation only so long as he will receive a substantial portion of the recovery. Under better drawn compensation acts legal fees are strictly limited. The elimination of large legal fees means that the injured man and his dependents receive the benefits—not the lawyers and expert witnesses used in the case."

Labor's support for such silicosis compensation laws was indicated by Frey, who explained that although "labor is primarily interested in having the cause removed, it is compelled in the meantime to actively engage itself in the efforts to secure adequate compensation for the afflicted and their families."

The conference was opened by Secretary Perkins on a happy note with a citation of the success of silicosis prevention in some industries as proof that "silicosis can be prevented." Miss Perkins estimated that roughly 500,000 workers in the country are exposed to the disease.

Graf Is Denied Permit To Fly Over France

Berlin, April 14 (A.P.).—The German air ministry said today permission for the Graf Zeppelin, making another flight from Friedrichshafen to South America, to fly over France was refused by the French government.

The Graf, commanded by Hans von Schiller, left Friedrichshafen at 7:10 p. m. yesterday, bearing 16 passengers, mails and freight on the voyage over the South Atlantic.

The air ministry said the Zeppelin's route lay by way of The Netherlands, making the trip 10 hours longer, since a French permit to fly over that territory was denied.

Verdict on Ritter Is Expected Today

By the Associated Press.

The impeachment case of Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter, of Florida—the twelfth such trial in 137 years—was handed to a Senate jury yesterday with ringing orations for conviction and acquittal.

Because only a two-hour session was held, a verdict of the seven charges of "high crimes and misdemeanors" in office, lodged against the Southern jurist, was put off until today.

Seven separate roll calls will be taken in open session after deliberations in secret are completed. A two-thirds majority on any one of the votes will be required for conviction, which carries with it removal from office.

Judge Ritter, a former Denver lawyer, is charged with conspiracy to bring a receivership suit in his own court; granting exorbitant fees in the suit to a former law partner, A. L. Rankin, "corruptly" receiving part of the fees; practicing law while on the bench, and evading income taxes.

Nationalists End Session.

Lucknow, India, April 14 (A.P.).—The Indian Nationalist Congress closed today with shouts of "Long live the revolution!" The congress, however, did not order any direct revolutionary steps by its members. It expressed sympathy with peoples of India under the present rule.

Ruling by Byrns Asked to Force Farm Debt Vote

Speaker to Decide if Dead, Retired Members Are Included in 'Total.'

In a desperate effort to force a vote on the $3,000,000,000 Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage bill, the House farm inflation bloc yesterday demanded a ruling from Speaker Joseph W. Byrns on the number of Representatives constituting "total membership" of the House.

The House normally has 435 members, but 5 of them have died and 1 has resigned, leaving actually only 429 members in attendance.

A majority of the "total membership" of the House is required to force a vote on the inflationary measure. Already the inflationists have 214 signatures on a petition to compel a vote. If Byrns rules 435 constitutes the total membership, sponsors of the bill will require four more names, and names have been coming hard of late. If, on the other hand, he finds 429 is the total membership, only one more signature is needed, and the inflationists claim they have that promised.

Representative Gerald J. Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin, made the request for a ruling just before the House adjourned yesterday, and the Speaker is expected to rule sometime today. Expectations are he will rule that signatures on the Frazier-Lemke petition must reach a majority of 435.

At least one of the 214 signers of the bloc is now dead, but the late Speaker Rainey ruled that the signature of a dead man on a petition was good until his successor in Congress is elected, so the Frazier-Lemke group claims the full 214.

For two years the bloc has been vainly attempting to get sufficient names to force a vote on their inflation measure. Once the number of signatures reached 215, but House leaders swung into action on word the Administration does not favor the bill, and several Democratic members withdrew their names. Recently leaders have been inactive in this respect, and the number of signatures has crept upward again.

House Democratic Whip Pat Boland, who has made a poll on the bill, claims there are not enough votes in the House to pass it, and many of those who signed the petition will not vote for it.

Representative Compton White (Democrat), of Idaho, has in his pocket a second petition to call a Democratic caucus on the bill. Although this petition has the required number of Demoratic signatures (25), White has declined to do anything more about it. He told reporters he did not believe the caucus would give the necessary two-thirds vote to bind Democrats for the measure.

Quake Rocks China State.

Ship With Art Treasure Driven Aground in Gale

Gibraltar, April 14 (A.P.).—A gale which drove aground today the S. S. Ranpura, bearing back to the Orient priceless Chinese art recently exhibited in London, was abating tonight, but the ship was farther ashore, despite the efforts of three tugs.

The vessel, which is convoyed by British destroyers because of the value of its cargo, went aground northwest of the harbor in a rough sea. Harbor authorities said her position was not precarious.

Own Tear Gas Hurled at Police By Mill Women

One Injured, One Arrested After Disturbance at Rockwood, Tenn.

By the Associated Press.

Rockwood, Tenn., April 14.—A tear-gas attack on several hundred hosiery mill strikers and sympathizers boomeranged here today when striking women hurled the missiles back at attacking police.

The clash occurred as the officers sought to clear a path for automobile loads of workers to enter the Rockwood Hosiery Mills, where a strike is in progress.

Young women picked up the bombs, projected by hand and double-barreled guns, and tossed them back into the ranks of the officers, inside the mill enclosure.

Are Forced to Flee.

White and green clouds of gas enveloped both strikers and officers, choking them and forcing them to flee. A stiff wind carried the gas clouds over the business district, blinding and choking citizens for several hours and causing several to suffer from nausea.

During the disturbance strikers hurled rocks and bricks at cars entering the mill gates. Mrs. John Carter, a mill worker riding in one of the cars, was cut slightly by flying glass and treated at a hospital.

A woman listed as Violet East was arrested on charges of disturbing the peace.

Troops Are Asked.

Local authorities asked Gov. McAlister for troops, indicating the situation was getting beyond their control. Subsequently the Governor sent three State officials here from Nashville to investigate.

James Huff, sr., general manager of the mills, said all departments were operating with reduced forces. Strikers claimed less than 150 were on the job.

The strike began a week ago when about 300 of the 400 employes walked out after mill officials had announced working hours would be increased from eight to ten daily with no increase in pay. Representatives of the Hosiery Workers' Union came here a few days later to organize the strikers. The mill reopened yesterday.

Soot Battle

Alexandria's rate should be so high, Silcox said, he found that 98⅛ per cent of the net profits of the Virginia Public Service Co. is obligated to support a debt structure of the Midwest Utilities, which recently was taken over by the Hopson firm.

Silcox's testimony along this line was halted when the city council reminded him that it was not a rate hearing.

He afterward told reporters that he was not so much concerned about the rate as he was about preservation of his property. Others at the meeting echoed this. They charged that the smoke and soot from the power plant fell like a dirty cloud on their houses and lawns, and even went indoors to soil the enamel, the bed covers and everything else. Many home owners along the waterfront section, they said, were threatening to move unless the nuisance was corrected.

Manager Howard, of the Virginia power concern, told the council that the E. M. Gilbert Engineering Corporation had been retained to make a survey and recommend the best equipment for the proposed plant.

J. A. Powell, representing the Gilbert firm, testified that a feature of the new plant would be a 200-foot smokestack, which, together with other equipment, would dissipate the smoke.

On top of this, however, W. A. F. Stephenson, one of the protesting citizens, presented a letter from the commanding officer of the Naval Air Station across the Potomac, saying that such a smokestack would be a dangerous hazard to pilots testing planes.

Earlier in the day a committee of 62 Alexandria citizens, all of them having homes in the six-block smoke-laden area near the waterfront, made public a telegram they had sent to Hopson in New York.

They threatened to use candles and kerosene instead of electricity unless something were done about the smoke nuisance.

Among the signers of the telegram were Silcox, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America; John Collier, commissioner of Indian Affairs; Paul Mallon, newspaper columnist; Rear Admiral Percival Rossiter, surgeon general of the Navy, and R. W. Bolling, brother of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the War President.

Myers Counsel Enters Motion To Appeal Case

Attorney Moves to Void Court's Denial of Plea for New Trial.

Counsel for Ernest Myers, Tri-State gangster, convicted of the "mistaken identity" murder of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route agent, moved yesterday to appeal his case to the Maryland Court of Appeals in Annapolis.

F. Bernard Welsh, one of the attorneys for Myers, noted an appeal with the Montgomery County Circuit Court from its denial of a new trial. He now has 20 days to file a bill of exceptions. If the judges of the circuit court sign this bill, Welsh then may go before the court of appeals.

Myers, who was sentenced to life imprisonment, is now under heavy guard in the Rockville Jail. The Department of Justice, it was learned yesterday, has agreed to transfer him to the Maryland Penitentiary in Baltimore, so that he can serve one year and nine months of an old sentence involving a Federal offense concurrently with his life sentence.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh and the three Washington detectives comprising the "Wilson squad", are going to Cumberland today to help in the arrangements for the trial there May 4 of Albert S. Sutton and John (Slim) Dunn, also indicted in the Wilson murder.

Revolt in Tijuana Halted by Troops

San Diego, Calif., April 14 (AP).—The entire Tijuana, Mex., garrison of 1,200 troops patrolled the border town of 8,000 inhabitants late today, to preserve order as government rations were issued to unemployed laborers who were reported as threatening revolt.

The garrison, normally about 500, was reinforced more than a fortnight ago by direct order from Mexico City.

The soldiers permitted no one to enter Tijuana without challenge and search. Visiting Americans crossing the border at San Ysidro, California port of entry, were questioned.

Proclamations were posted over the name of Capt. Miguel Gavira, calling upon the populace to reveal the whereabouts of all arms and ammunition and demanding surrender of personal firearms.

Threats to break away from Mexico and set up an independent state in the Northern District of Lower California were disclosed to have been voiced at a mass meeting of 1,500 persons last night.

500 Toast Victory Over Leave Bills

Nearly 50 employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing gathered in the Hotel Washington last night to toast their victory in obtaining annual leave and sick bills.

Sponsored by the local union, No. 105, Women's Union, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, National Federation of Federal Employes, the dinner was attended by Government officials, a member of Congress and Government workers.

Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, commended the work of Luther C. Steward, president of the federation, for his efforts and diplomacy in obtaining passage of the bills.

2 Kentucky Legislators Fight On Floor Over Labor, Make Up

By the Associated Press.

Frankfort, Ky., April 14.—Two Kentucky legislators who staged a fight on the floor this morning shook hands and made up before the House of Representatives late today. Gov. A. B. Chandler's aid, Marion Howard, who grabbed a pistol from Representatives John B. Mollette after Representative Marion T. McCarthy knocked him down, looked on as they swapped apologies.

A crash from the back of the chamber heralded opening of the day's hostilities. The legislators turned their minds from committee reports and crowded about McCarthy, a 27-year-old school teacher-politician, who was stomping on Mollette, a 35-year-old coal miner.

A shiny, pearl-handled, nickel-plated .38-caliber six-shooter appeared in Mollette's hand. Its point swung in random arcs toward the gallery. Some of the legislators fled the chamber; others returned to their desks and hid under them. Howard breezed through a broken field and took the gun. Mollette rose and went out.

McCarthy said Mollette called him a vile name when they quarreled last night over which was the better friend of labor. He said he swung today when Mollette came up, nudged him and reached toward his hip.

Mollette said he only wanted to converse, wasn't mad at anybody today and didn't have a gun. Some bystanders said the gun was handed the legislator after he went down.

Peace Unity

governing board of the Pan-American Union, contrasted conditions abroad with the "conciliatory atmosphere" on this continent, Charles A. Thomson, in a Foreign Policy Association report, asserted that dictatorships in Latin America are camplicating relationships between the United States and other New World countries.

The report, entitled "Dictatorship in the Dominican Republic," emphasized the difficulties inherent in the situation and the likelihood of their affecting adversely not only the "good neighbor policy of the Administration, but the plans for the Pan-American Peace Conference.

Thompson's findings arraigned the dictatorship of Gen. Trujillo in that republic as initiating "a reign of terror and repression resulting in the death or mysterious disappearance of a great number of his opponents. These included former cabinet ministers, former senators, leading politicians, journalists, ranchers, business men, students and labor leaders. The victims of the regime are declared by residents in the country to run into the hundreds and possibly thousands."

Concedes Achievements.

The report concedes Trujillo's constructive achievements include restoration of peace and order, a balanced budget and foreign debt agreement, a program of road, bridge and harbor construction, and agrarian and educational changes. Against these are balanced alleged widespread terroristic espionage, a system of monopolies controlled by Gen. Trujillo said to dominate the economic life of the island, and a subservient press.

Officers of the people's mandate committee called on Ambassadors and Ministers of the Latin-American republics yesterday, carrying felicitations from Dr. Mary E. Woolley, president of Mount Holyoke College and committee chairman, commending the activities of the union tending to peace.

Members of the delegation were Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York, member of the committee; Mrs. Worth B. Daniels, of Washington; Mrs. Raymond Clapper, of Maryland, secretary of the committee; Miss Anne Martin, of Colorado; Miss Abby Scott Baker, of Washington; Miss Emma Wold, Miss Matilda Young, of Washington; Miss Mary Moss Wellborn, of Mississippi, and Mrs. Eleanor Fowler, of Connecticut.

Appeal for Jewish Aid Marks Service

Washington Jews were urged to contribute generously to aid persecuted members of their faith in other lands, at services marking the close of the eight-day Passover season yesterday in all local orthodox synagogues.

Persecution of the Jews in Poland and Germany and the role that Palestine is playing in providing a haven for refugees provided the text for Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, of the Adas Israel congregation, and other spiritual leaders.

A united Jewish appeal for $50,000 is about to be launched here for relief work in Europe and rehabilitation of the Jewish homeland in Palestine. The drive represents a merger of two local campaigns, one sponsored by the American joint distribution committee and the other by the Zionist organization.

Opening features of the drive will be a dinner tomorrow night of influential Jews at the Woodmont Country Club. Dr. Abram Simon and Rabbi Metz will be speakers. Morris Simon will be toastmaster. The general canvass for funds will begin April 17.

Manila Charges Nazi Ship Sailed In Secret Zone

By the Associated Press.

Manila, April 14.—A charge that the German liner Reliance passed through one of the United States' secret defense strongholds at Manila Harbor last March 27 was voiced here today.

The Philippine customs bureau cited the Reliance's captain to show within 48 hours why administrative action should not be taken against him. The bureau said the vessel passed too close to fortified Fraile Island.

When the Reliance arrived here, Alvin T. Simonds, Boston manufacturer, and his wife left it, asserting they had been "insulted" by German passengers aboard because Simonds had given an interview in Singapore criticizing the Nazi government.

Fraile Island, with its more famous companion, Corregidor, commands the 12-mile-wide harbor entrance 30 miles out of the city.

All ships are forbidden to enter prescribed areas about the islands, which are known to be fortified. The secrecy cloaking this defense system was emphasized recently when Army authorities declined to give out any information respecting Corregidor.

Of volcanic origin, Corregidor stands high above the water. It is about 3 miles long and about a mile wide. It is sometimes referred to as "the Gibraltar of the Philippines."

Fraile Island, 5 miles south of Corregidor, is only about a mile long and a half-mile wide, but is of the same general nature as its more formidable companion.

Howard Trustees Allot $1,433,319

The board of trustees of Howard University, at their annual session yesterday, approved 1936 appropriations totaling $1,433,319. The report of Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, university president, showed the Government 1936-1937 appropriation was $675,000.

A grant of $100,000 by the general education board of New York was announced for clinical and surgucal departments of the university school of medicine. The summer school, discontinued in 1933, was ordered re-established in 1937, and a comprehensive program was directed to be prepared.

Trustees re-elected included Dr. Louise Ball, Dr. George W. Coleman, George W. Crawford, Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, Dr. Charles B. Garvin, Dr. John R. Hawkins, Dr. Leverett S. Lyon and W. Justin Carter. T. L. Hungate, of New York, was re-elected chairman of the board; George W. Crawford, vice chairman; Dr. Emmett J. Scott, secretary, and V. D. Johnston, treasurer.

JOHN R. FORTE.

Circuit Court Had Refused Appeal From Numbers Conviction.

John R. Forte, convicted "numbers" operator who recently lost a plea to the United States Court of Appeals, was committed to the District Jail yesterday when Justice F. Dickinson Letts in District Supreme Court refused to grant a continuation of his bond.

Forte was the first person in the District to contest a "numbers" conviction. He was charged under the lottery law and sentenced to 3 to 6 months in prison. The United States Court of Appeals held the "numbers" game a lottery.

Asking to remain on bond, Forte sought to have his case referred to the court probation officer.

Through Attorneys Charles E. Ford and Milton Kaplan, he claimed he had never been charged with any crime before, and had, since his arrest, worked as a mechanic in a garage. Letts ruled that Justice James M. Proctor, before whom Forte was tried, had given him every consideration by giving such a light sentence.

The Forte case was taken by police to mean that persons now charged with violation of the gaming laws in connection with the "numbers" game could legally be charged with violation of the lotteries law. The ruling is expected to deal a death blow to the widely played game that originated in Harlem. Prior to the ruling those charged with operating numbers game were able to "beat the rap" because there was thought to be no specific law covering their operations.

Assistant United States Attorney Roger Robb, who prosecuted Forte, said a score of "numbers" cases now awaiting trial would be placed on the calendar.

Dry Leader Brands Repeal Great Folly

Repeal of prohibition constitutes America's "greatest folly," J. Raymond Schmidt, secretary of the National Civic League and vice chairman of the United Dry Forces, said last night at a meeting of the Northeast Suburban W. C. T. U. in the Sherwood Presbyterian Church.

"It is folly," he said, "to think that the revenue from the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages can justify the loss of life and limb on the highways due to drinking drivers, and the debauchery of our youth in licensed roadhouses, night clubs and drink emporiums which disregard all laws for their regulation for the sake of added profit."

Schmidt urged the gathering to forget past defeats and resume fighting for future victories on behalf of total abstinence for the individual and prohibition for the District and the Nation.

The United Dry Forces has set 50,000 as the goal of its membership drive. A mass meeting is scheduled to be held Sunday night, May 10, probably at the Calvary Baptist Church, to be addressed by Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, U. S. M. C., retired.

Mrs. Hudson Inherits $79,000 From Mother

Mrs. Barbara Scudder Hudson, of 1901 Wyoming avenue, has inherited more than $79,000 from her mother, Mrs. Marion C. Scudder, who died in Greenwich, Conn., March 16, according to word received here yesterday.

Mrs. Hudson, a member of the Junior League and prominent socially here and in New York, is the wife of David E. Hudson, a graduate of Missouri, Harvard and Oxford universities.

Black to Query 'Constitution Lobby' Group

Gov. Talmadge of Georgia Is Active Leader in Southern Bloc.

The Senate Lobby Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, today planed to go into the activities of the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution.

Following its policy of investigating one anti-New Deal organization after another, the committee will examine John Henry Kirby, of Texas, head of the committee. Gov. Talmadge of Georgia is an active leader of the organization.

The committee will inquire into a contribution made by Lammont du Pont. Du Pont, the committee revealed, also was a contributor to the Farmers Independence Council, put under fire yesterday.

Stiff Fight Expected.

As the committee resumes its inquiry, the House will consider a resolution to appropriate $10,000 for the committee's legal expenses growing out of suits following seizure of telegrams. A stiff fight is expected on the floor.

Before the committee yesterday was Stanley F. Morse, vice president of the farm organizatoin. He listed a large number of contributors, including Ogden L. Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury; Col. Henry Breckenridge, Democratic candidate for President; George A. Ball, Republican national committeeman from Indiana; W. W. Aldrich, of the Chase National Bank, New York, in addition to officials of a number of meat-packing concerns.

Attempting to connect the farm organizatoin with the American Liberty League, the committee brought out that Morse at one time had been employed by the league to write a report on the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. He said he received $250 a month, for expenses only.

Records Are Open, He Says.

Morse, who insisted that he be subpenaed before he would appear before the committee, said he had sought the legal advice of Ralph Shaw, Chicago lawyer and head of the Illinois Liberty League. He said he had been advised to take before the committee such records of his organization as he could carry, and to inform the committee that its records were open to inspection. Shaw is a law partner of Silas Strawn, who recently obtained an injunction to prevent the Western Union Telegraph Co. from turning over his telegrams to the committee.

Morse said his organization was not political but that it was for a constructive farm policy. He said that both Col. Frank Knox and Gov. Alfred M. Landon, Republican Presidential candidates, had been approached for support by the council. He said he had obtained little sympathy from Knox.

The witness declared that he personally had secured a $5,000 contribution from duPont and swore that the Liberty League had nothing to do with the payment. DuPont is the largest supporter of the league.

New Flying Boat Claims 2 Records

Stratford, Conn., April 14 (AP).—A Sikorsky S-43 type flying boat soared to a height of 27,950 feet with a 500-kilogram load today, and established a claim on two international altitude records.

The huge craft made a perfect take-off from the Mollison Airport shortly after noon and, after remaining aloft for 1 hour and 30 minutes, landed on the Housatonic River. Capt. Boris Sergievsky, Sikorsky's chief test pilot, was at the controls.

The aircraft concern announced that the craft improved on the absolute altitude record of 18,642 feet established January 25, 1935, by Harry Richman, the entertainer, in an S-39 type Sikorsky ship and the payload record of 17,877 feet with 500 kilograms credited to Lieut. R. L. Burke, of the United States Coast Guard, in a Grumman amphibian on June 27, 1935.

In addition to Capt. Sergievsky, the giant flying boat carried Igor Sikorsky, designer and inventor of the craft, and a plant mechanic.

Ancient Egyptian Tomb Discovered

Cairo, Egypt, April 14 (AP).—Prof. Selim Bey Hassan announced the discovery of another ancient Egyptian tomb today, believed to be the burial place of Knum Baef, a son of Chefron of the Fourth Dynasty.

A series of strange incidents prevented the archeologist from forcing an entrance into the tomb. After a rope had been placed around the first limestone block sealing the entrance, Hassan's foreman was stabbed by a laborer.

A short time later the professor himself began to feel ill in the intense heat and decided to postpone attempts to open the tomb.

(Prof. Hassan recently announced discovery of a tomb containing the mummy of a princess believed to be the daughter of Cheops, builder of the pyramid near Gizeh about 3,700 B. C.)

Free school buses, he said, ought to carry Catholic children to Catholic schools.

"There would be as much logic in forbidding the Catholic child the use of tax-provided streets and sidewalks on the way to school, as in depriving him of tax-provided bus transportation."

Proposals to create a Federal department of education threatens to build a "scholastic bureaucracy" which would deprive parents of their children's training, he said.

Such a Federal secretary of education, if one were named, would "in all likelihood be some political schoolmaster or schoolma'am with a Messiah complex," he observed.

The Most Rev. Francis W. Howard, bishop of Covington, Ky., criticized the advances of mass production and Communism.

He said collectivism sprang not from alien agitation, but "began years ago in mass production and corporate expansion that were wanting in respect for either human or so-called property rights."

Devoting the bulk of its time to group meetings on parish school, university, secondary school, blind education and seminary problems, the convention will reassemble in a general convocation Thursday for a closing service at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Alonzo Ware Killed.

Alonzo Ware, 21, Negro, of 1956 Second street northwest, died in Emergency Hospital yesterday a few hours after he was crushed between an electric coal tipple and the concrete ceiling at the District's central heating plant. Ware's body was discovered by John Watson, 1900 F street northwest, foreman of the plant. Ware died from a fractured skull, crushed chest and legs.

port will be filed before adjournment.

Just how extensive will be the inquiry to be made by the commission is dependent upon the wishes of the majority. Some members who have participated in past airport hearings believe there is sufficient data available to obviate the necessity for further hearings.

It also is believed that a public hearing, in view of the previous quarrels between sponsors of the Gravelly Point site and the Washington Airport, might only prolong the inquiry and becloud the issue.

Several members of both the House and the Senate District Committees believe that only by selecting an entirely new site can the commission avoid another indefinite snarl in local airport legislation.

Farm Parley Asks Import Restriction

By the Associated Press.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 14.—An eight-State farm conference adopted resolutions here today calling for repeal of reciprocal trade agreements and restriction of imports that compete with native-grown goods.

George N. Peek, of Moline, Ill., former AAA administrator, delivering an unscheduled, informal talk after the resolutions were adopted, charged that "we have not lost our foreign markets, we have thrown them away."

Peek, a prominent farm leader for the last 20 years, split with Secretary Wallace over the Administration's foreign-trade policies and resigned as AAA administrator.

He said the Administration has followed the theory that the more goods imported, the more will be exported, but he charged the "theory doesn't work out." Delegates from Iowa, North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Illinois, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas attended the conference.

House Inquiry Into War Goods Sales Dropped

No Report Will Be Made; Committee Members Silent on Move.

By the Associated Press.

The House Military Committee yesterday abruptly dropped its investigation into diversion of War Department surplus goods from intended charitable to private business uses.

Beyond saying that the committee had voted unanimously to end the investigation and that no report on its proceedings would be made, Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, and other members declined to discuss the move.

McSwain told newsmen no further hearings would be held "unless the committee reverses itself."

W. Frank James, former ranking Republican member of the committee from Michigan, and now employed as its investigator, had just completed testifying when Representative McLean (Republican), New Jersey, suddenly moved the committee go into executive session.

Discontinuance of the investigation came on the heels of assertions on Monday by Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, that McSwain started the inquiry without consent of other committee members and that witnesses were not getting "a fair deal."

The commttee on February 2, 1932, adopted a resolution authorizing the War Department to sell surplus goods below cost for distribution to the needy through the American Legion.

The plan was submitted to the legion's national rehabilitation committee by Robert J. Byers, adjutant of the Michigan American Legion, approved and passed on to the military committee.

James told the committee he had no intimation of any diversion of surplus goods prior to February 2. Maj. Gen. G. Van Horn Moseley, former deputy chief of staff and now commander of the Fourth Corps Area, and Lieut. Col. William R. Gruber, on duty in the War Department at the time, both testified, however, that they telephoned James of reports which had reached the department of the proposed diversion.

Fake Delivery Boy Held Attack-Killer

New York, April 14 (U.P.).—Police turned tonight to the theory that Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton, writer, might have been attacked and strangled by a man who gained entrance to her apartment by posing as a delivery boy.

A piece of cord, found on a bed, still was the best clew available. It was used, police believe, to tie Mrs. Truder attacked her. Unable to find any similar cord around the Beekman place apartment, detectives said the murderer might have brought the cord around some package which he was carrying to give the impression he was making a delivery.

A legitimate messenger, bringing a dress which had been cleaned and pressed, called at the apartment about the time Mrs. Titterton was killed. Getting no response from his knock on the door, he took the dress back to the shop.

Investigation proceeded in the police laboratory, where experts were examining fingerprints on the Titterton bed and articles of clothing which were ripped off the 34-year-old woman's body by her assailant.

Bloodhounds Cost $20 Hen Thieves Get Away

Manteo, Va., April 14 (AP).—Buckingham's Negro citizenry shook its collective head today and opined that five old clucking hens and one rooster were not worth $20.

Roost robbers took the squawking fowls from the henhouse of an aged Negro of the county, name undivulged.

The thieves' victim, bent on revenge, sent for a pack of bloodhounds that cost him $10. Transportation for 50 miles cost him $10 more.

The dogs found not a feather.

Italy's Terms Awaited.

Geneva, April 14 (AP).—The League of Nations, once more wrestling with the Italo-Ethiopian war, gloomily awaited tonight the arrival of Italy's peace terms as communications were received from both belligerents.

An Ethiopian note accused Italians of gassing 13 Ethiopian towns. Italy asserted Premier Mussolini is freeing slaves in the African kingdom.

Signed by the Ethiopian delegate to Geneva, Wolde Mariam, the Ethiopian communication listed 13 towns and dates on which they were supposed to have been attacked with poison gas.

Part of the note said: "During the last four bombardments of Quoram April 4, 5, 6 and 7 the town was literally drenched with gas. The gas most frequently used was mustard gas."

Slavery Proclamation.

A letter from Fulvio Suvich, Italian undersecretary of state, said slavery had been abolished in territories occupied by Italian troops. It mentioned a proclamation issued by Marshal Pietro Badoglio to populations of Tigre, Amhara and Gojjam: "There can be no slavery where the Italian flag flies. I have prohibited the purchase and sale of slaves. Slaves who are in your territories are freed."

This letter was passed on to the League's advisory committee of experts on slavery.

Possibilities of peace were talked over by Salvador de Madariaga, chairman of the League Council Committee of Thirteen, with Mariam.

He was forced to talk to the Ethiopian delegate alone, since Baron Pompeo Aloisi, the Italian delegate, will not arrive until tomorrow. Mariam said peace should be effected only within the spirit of the League Covenant.

The Committee of Thirteen will meet Thursday to consider progress of negotiations. Should Italy's peace terms be deemed too high, a meeting of the committee on sanctions is to be called the following day.

Blanton Stages 'Shadow Fight' WithZioncheck

Arm Swinging and Smirks Mark 'Battle' Over Supply Bill.

It was a dull day in the House yesterday, with members impatient to get away to the ball game, when two members staged their third shadow boxing bout of the session for the amusement of the Easter holiday visitors.

Battling Tom Blanton, Texas light heavyweight, took offense at remarks of Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, the Washington mauler, and for a few minutes visitors in the gallery thought they were going to see a fight . . . Members of the House knew better, and no one stirred.

The trouble, which was only a return engagement of a no-blow match held during debate on the District supply bill, started yesterday when Zioncheck arose to complain against the expulsion of six words from the Congressional Record by Representative Boylan (Democrat), of New York.

Zioncheck had interrupted Boylan during a Jefferson Day speech on Monday, and yesterday he objected because the New Yorker had expunged from the Record the Washingtonian's challenge:

"The gentleman can't answer the question!"

During his discourse Zioncheck added that another member had been assailing him by innuendo. Fearing that he had confused some of his colleagues by the term, he went on to make it clear that Blanton was the man he had in mind.

"If these innuendoes are to be allowed," he said, "I will put into the record that the gentleman from Texas is the son of a Texan and then revise my remarks by eliminating the 'Texan' and leaving it blank."

At this Battling Tom, who was sitting directly in front of Zioncheck, arose and began waving his arms more in the fashion of a windmill than a trained boxer.

Zioncheck, probably realizing he was in no danger, never raised his arms in defense, but merely smirked.

Members likewise were unimpressed, and nobody attempted to interfere. Yet no blows were exchanged.

Everybody still agreed that it was a dull day.

Peace in Ethiopia Urged by Pope Pius

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 14.—Pope Pius has asked France to use its "good offices" to bring a quick end to the Italo-Ethiopian war, sources close to the government said tonight.

These sources declared the representations had been made by Luigi Cardinal Maglione, Papal Nuncio to Paris, who was reported to have told Premier Albert Sarraut that the prelate was "worried" by the possibility of "serious repercussions" which might follow extended sanctions against the Fascist nation.

Cardinal Maglione suggested, it was said, that France attempt to "convince Great Britain" there is "nothing to gain" from increasing the war penalties against Italy.

Birth Control Data Urged by Andrews

Voluntary parenthood and reliable birth-control information were urged by the Rev. George Reid Andrews, executive secretary of the American Eugenics Society, in addressing a birth-control luncheon at the Woman's City Club yesterday.

Dr. Andrews held that the legal distribution of such knowledge for all was a basic plank in a eugenics platform.

"We don't need less birth control, but more and better birth control," Dr. Andrews said.

"We need a situation in which every social worker, nurse and doctor, Red Cross worker and public servant makes it a part of his routine business to refer clients to physicians for information about family regulation."

Japan-America Peace Urged By 27 Leaders

Cable Dispatched to Tokyo Premier Expressing Hope for New Era.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 14.—Twenty-seven prominent Americans today cabled Premier Koki Hirota of Japan expressing the hope that the two countries will work together to preserve peace.

"We wish to express, through your excellency, to the people of Japan, our desire to look forward to a new era in Japan-American relations," the message said in part.

The message was prompted by Premier Hirota's statement several weeks ago that Japan will not engage in war with Russia, the signers stated.

Among those signing the cablegram were Dean Carl W. Ackerman, of Columbia University School of Journalism; Isaiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins University; Harry Woodburn Chase, chancellor of New York University; Douglas Southall Freeman, editor of the Richmond (Va.) News Leader; Grove Patterson, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors; Bishop William T. Manning, Episcopal Diocese, New York; William Cardinal O'Connell, Boston; Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution; John F. O'Hara, president of Notre Dame University; William Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette; Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern University; Arthur J. Sinnott, editor of the Newark Evening News; William H. Crocker, Crocker National Bank, San Francisco; the Rev. James M. Drought, Maryknoll Fathers; Archbishop John T. McNicholas, Cincinnati Archdiocese; Bishop George Craig Stewart, Episcopal Diocese, Northern Illinois; Francis Wilson, justice of the Supreme Court, Illinois, and Evans Woollen, jr., Fletcher Trust, Indianapolis.

Federal Agents Seize 3,000 Lbs. Of Marijuana

Haul, Valued at $100,000, Said to Be Destined for New York Smokers.

By the United Press.

Blue Mountain, Miss., April 14.—Federal and State narcotic agents tonight confiscated 3,000 pounds of marijuana, dread smoking weed, in what was believed the biggest seizure of the drug in United States' history.

The weed, valued at between $100,000 and $150,000, was confiscated on the farm of S. E. Jernigan, 3 miles east of here. Jernigan's son, Herman Jernigan, 37, was arrested on a charge of violating the State uniform narcotic act and later was released under $1,000 bond.

He is expected to be tried at the July term of Tippah County Circuit Court.

The raid was the opening of a determined drive by Federal and State authorities to wipe out marijuana and barbituric, also a narcotic, in Mississippi.

Jernigan was quoted by officers as saying he was seeking to sell his product to an alleged king pin of all marijuana trade in New York at $12 per pound. He refused to divulge the name of the New Yorker.

The accused man also was quoted as saying he was trying to dispose of the narcotic weed through universities for "research work."

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 14. Two-hundred and fifty baby chicks were burned to death yesterday afternoon when a brooder house belonging to Garland Bowers, along Martinsburg-Williamsport pike, was destroyed by fire. Martinsburg firemen, called to the scene, expressed belief a coal stove used in heating the brooder became overheated or exploded.

$47,000,000 Made Available For Seed Loans

Fund Total Is Raised by Transfer From Other Sources.

The sum of $47,000,000 was made available yesterday to farmers for seed loans by additions of $7,000,000 transferred from resettlement administration funds and $10,000,000 from emergency relief funds to $30,000,000 already allotted.

On February 26 President Roosevelt vetoed the $50,000,000 seed loan bill, because no provision had been made in 1936 or 1937 budgets for such a draft on the Treasury. He re-stated his policy of tapering off on seed-loan appropriations, and $30,000,000 was named as a fair allotment to meet the needs of the farmers.

The President's veto was met by threats from angry Senators to override, with Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, the spearhead of the movement. As this movement took shape, and as complaints came in from the country that resettlement clients, who were receiving direct grants, were refused FCA seed loans, the Administration reconsidered rapidly, it was learned.

Yesterday's manipulation of funds to reach $47,000,000 restores the seed-loan appropriation for needs this year to nearly the sum set in the bill vetoed by the President, $50,000,000.

Senate indignation was expected to simmer down with this approximate restoration of the original goal, official sources held.

In the meantime, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, in a radio review of the "Back to the Land" movement in the last five years, stated yesterday that thousands who had returned to farms were now on relief rolls. This group, which he called "industrial refugees," is huge, it was indicated by his figures from the 1935 farm census, showing an increase of 523,702 farms in five years, making a total of 6,812,350 in 1935.

Rev. Kullmar Is Named Head Of Presbytery

The Rev. Fred Adam Kullmar, pastor of Warner Memorial Presbyterian Church, Kensington, Md., was elected moderator of the Washington City Presbytery at the annual sessions yesterday. The meeting, the sixty-sixth stated spring assembly of the presbytery, was held in Peck Memorial Chapel, Twenty-eighth and M streets northwest.

Kullmar was inducted to the office, which he will hold for one year, by the Rev. R. Paul Schearer, retiring moderator. The Rev. B. Andrew Matzen, Berwyn, Md., Presbyterian Church, was named vice moderator to succeed Mr. Kullmar.

At the morning session the 80 delegates, representing all Presbyterian churches in Washington and vicinity, heard a sermon by Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, who leaves the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church this month for a New York pastorate.

Dr. Sizoo submitted his formal resignation from the local parish. It was accepted after several ministers and elders praised the pastor for outstanding service during his 12-year pastorate in Washington.

The delegates elected three ministers and three elders to represent Washington at the Presbyterian general assembly May 28 in Syracuse, N. Y. The ministers are the Rev. Henry B. Wooding, of Eckington church; the Rev. Irving W. Ketchum, of Peck Memorial Chapel; the Rev. Robert M. Skinner, of Georgetown church, and the lay delegates are E. W. Martin, New York Avenue church; Chester R. Smith, Sherwood church, and George Ralston, of Western church.

The alternates are: Ministers, Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary, Washington Federation of Churches; the Rev. Henry Campbell, Fairmont Heights church; the Rev. Robert C. Simmons, supply pastor; elders, Victor L. Chestnut, Hyattsville church; Charles Morris, Fifteenth street church, and Arthur Hark, of the Vienna, Va., church.

Dr. John C. Palmer, of Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, announced plans for receiving Moderator James A. Vance, D. D., of Detroit, who will be in Washington April 27. Dr. Palmer is chairman of the reception committee, and Mr. Ketchum is chairman of a luncheon to be given in honor of the moderator.

Eight Students Get Honor Key Of Civitan Club

Boys Chosen by School Principals for Their Leadership.

Chosen by their school principals for their qualities of leadership and citizenship, eight local high school seniors were presented the Civitan Honor Key at a club dinner at Hotel Lafayette last night.

In congratulating the boys, E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel and member of the Civitan Club, urged them to study the history and operation of the Government. "The Government will pass from us if citizens don't watch its operation," he said.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, said that in addition to possessing a "sound mind in a sound body," it was necessary to have sound ideals. These, he said, should be both for their own conduct and for the carrying out of social justice.

Presenting awards, Dr. Maurice Tonwsend, former international president of Civitan, said that the club "recognized not precocity, but efforts and the ability to overcome obstacles."

Child BadlyBurned When Dress Ignites

Five-year-old Mary Rose Payne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Payne, of the 1200 block of D street northeast, was burned seriously yesterday morning when her clothing caught fire as she was at play in her home.

The family maid beat out the blaze with her hands when she was attracted by the child's screams. Police said that matches nearby, with which Mary and her brother, Johnny, 3, played, were responsible.

Physicians at Casualty Hospital said last night the child had an excellent chance to recover.

Spain Anniversary Marred by Rioting

Madrid, April 14 (AP).—Scattered disorders, high-lighted by the explosion of a string of cannon crackers behind the presidential reviewing stand in the capital, marked Spain's celebration of her fifth anniversary as a republic today.

During Communist demonstrations, after the explosion, one man was killed, three were injured seriously and about six persons suffered bruises.

Diego Martinez Barrio, interim president, and Premier Manuel Azana calmed the crowds as the parade continued uninterrupted. Among the spectators near the presidential stand stood the Diplomatic Corps, including United States Ambassador Claude G. Bowers and his military attache, Col. Stephen Fuqua.

In various points throughout Spain, it was reported, small demonstrations of Communists took on an antiarmy and anticivil guard character, although no serious incidents occurred.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

The five-day week, already in effect for about 325,000 Government employes, may within the next year, become general throughout the service, except possibly in some agencies that must be operated on a seven-day basis. Strong sentiment is developing for the five-day plan, though the question of reduction of hours will doubtless lead to controversy.

BAKER.

Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, long recognized as a friend of Federal workers, particularly those in the lower-paid groups, has introduced a bill which would provide for a five-day week for all employes, with certain designated exemptions and exceptions. The bill also would decrease the hours of work each week by cutting out the present half-day on Saturday. It is specifically provided, however, that compensation is not to be increased except that weekly earnings shall be continued at the same figure by adjusting per day or per hour pay if necessary.

Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, is reported to have suggested a five-day 40-hour week, thus increasing from 39 to 40 the present hours of departmental employes in Washington, who work a five-and-a-half-day week.

Administrative officers in the Government service appear favorable to a five-day week if hours are not reduced, and probably would not hold out for the additional hour provided under the Ramspeck plan.

The American Federation of Government Employes is making a test of employe sentiment as to the 39-hour-five-and-a-half-day week and the 40-hour-five-day week. There is thus far a pretty close division in this poll, one important factor favoring the five-and-a-half day week being the attendance of a large number of Government employes at educational institutions in Washington.

The employes are now on a work schedule such that they can attend classes beginning at 5 p. m., and college courses are arranged accordingly. An additional hour's work the first five days of the week would make it impossible for many employes to continue their college training, under the present college schedule, and a five-day week during the summer months would not be a wholly acceptable compromise for some of these students, inasmuch as many Washington schools operate on a basis of four terms a year, holding classes in the summer months as well as during the normal school year.

But, proponents of the five-day-week plan point out that the various schools catering to Government employes in the evening classes would adjust their schedules to conform to the Government schedule of working hours.

Agriculture Post No. 36, American Legion, will be host tonight at its first annual ball and entertainment at the Washington Hotel, under general direction of Joseph L. Koehl, commander. Miss Roby W. Stehr, promotion officer, announces Arthur Godfrey, "sun dialer" and "moon dialer" of WJSV, and several actors from the local theaters will furnish the entertainment.

New Fire Controls Planned.

A new program of experimentation in forest-fire control is being launched by Forest Service, according to Roy Headley, chief of Fire Control Division, who has just returned from a recent fire control meeting at Spokane, Wash., which was attended by foresters from nine National Forest Regions.

"Experiments in fighting fires by planes and by radio will be important parts of the program," says Headley. "We plan to find out how far we can go in using planes to develop a workable system. We expect to try dropping water or chemicals direct on fires to retard their progress until ground crews can reach the scene."

The fire forces also plan to experiment with dropping bombs on small fires, which would retard them by throwing dirt over them.

George M. McCann (F), War, has obtained a patent on a telescope mount for guns, to be attached to the fixed sight base of the gun.

Page County Board Studies Road Plans

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., April 14.—At a meeting of the Page County Board of Supervisors here Monday the proposed budget for roads in Page and Shenandoah counties was discussed. It was said nothing would be done until all repairs due to the recent flood had been made. The board passed a resolution permitting transfer of $6,000 allocated for the Fort Valley-Bixler Ferry road to the maintenance fund, if necessary.

Many of the feeder roads into the mountains are entirely washed out. Officials held these roads should be relocated entirely rather than rebuilt.

Last year the counties had available $67,000 for roads. The same amount is expected this year.

One of the first major tasks will be repairing of the bridge over the Shenandoah River on the Eastside highway.

Construction projects proposed include: Pine Grove road, near Stanley; Steam Hollow road, in Shenandoah Iron Works district; Kobler road west of Bixler's Ferry, and these bridges, Dry Run Bridge, near Luray; Stony Man, on Route 611, and Morning Star road, near Judd's store.

$85,000,000 Added In Senate FloodBill

Another $85,000,000 for projects was tentatively attached yesterday to the omnibus flood control bill, swelling it well above $400,000,000 and laying the ground work for another Senate battle.

Action of the Senate Commerce Committee in adding the projects—subject to later consideration—coincided with House approval of the $50,000,000 Reconstruction Corporation flood and storm loan bill. The House vote, 85 to 11, sent the relief measure to the White House.

Before the Senate Commerce Committee pinned on the new projects, it accepted from Army engineers recommendations against about $100,000,000 of projects involving both flood control and power development.

Addition of the new projects appeared intended to mollify at least part of the opposition against the first draft of the bill, which leaned heavily toward the Eastern states hit by the recent flood. The new bill contained many Mississippi drainage projects in Missour, Illinois and Arkansas, as well as a selection from the Pacific Northwest.

Commissioners Approve Child Welfare Program

Approval of the Commissioners was given yesterday to the plan of the Board of Public Welfare for administration of the child welfare provisions of the social security law.

The division will have to do with administering aid for crippled children, prevention of delinquency and aid for dependent children, for which the Federal Social Security Board advances a part of the cost.

Two Youths Admit Torturing Boy, 4

Jerseyville, Ill., April 14 (AP).—Two boys, one 14 and the other 13 years old, admitted tonight, officers said, that they branded 4-year-old Joseph Hagen because they "wanted to torture somebody."

The youths, Gail Tucker and Dwight Dabbs, both of Jerseyville, calmly told police they applied a heated wire to the child's body 30 or 40 times after gagging and undressing him.

Jerseyville Police Chief Shortal said Joseph was playing with his wagon when the older boys offered to push him. He said they took him to a barn where they seized and stripped him.

"While one of them held him down, the other would heat a piece of wire with a match and apply it to his skin," Shortal said. "This went on for half an hour until another boy came by and frightened them away."

John Hagen, the child's father and a CCC worker, tonight swore out a warrant charging the older boys with mayhem and delinquency.

The Baltimore Speech.

President Roosevelt properly selected the subject of unemployment as his theme in the speech at Baltimore, regarded as the opening gun in his campaign for re-election. But having chosen the problem uppermost in all minds, he failed utterly to treat it with the thought and analysis which the issue demands.

At a Boy Scout rally the Presidential exhortation for "the releasing and the enlistment of the spirit of youth" would have been appropriate. It is also the stuff which Hitler and Mussolini use very effectively when they want to align the Jugendbewegung or the Balilla behind the purposes of the corporate state. But as a message to the mature minds of a self-governing democracy such rhetoric is hollow and meaningless. American youth is quite keen enough to recognize the need of a carefully planned program if the unemployment problem is to be solved. No hint of such a program is to be found in the Baltimore speech.

It is not the audacity necessary to solve the unemployment problem which the President lacks. His denunciation of a stable currency and a balanced budget as "panaceas" is more than sufficiently audacious, coming from one who has exhausted nearly every alphabetical combination in unsuccessful efforts to get the unemployed back to permanent work through direct State action. But to confront the problem successfully, presumption is not enough. In Mr. Roosevelt's own words, the country has "a right to expect something better than that."

Aside from vague intimations that the Administration stands ready to interfere more and more with private enterprise and a further pledge to "do something" in the hope that it will work, the Baltimore speech was utterly devoid of constructive suggestions. The nearest approach to a formula was the plea for curtailing hours of work, on the easy assumption that this will automatically take up the employment lag.

Certainly employers, so far as varying conditions in varying industries permit, should examine and act upon this possibility for all there is in it. But much more than that will be essential if the heart of the unemployment problem is to be reached.

Its solution, beyond governmental effort more scientific and carefully planned than boondoggling, will depend primarily on the release of that individual pioneering enterprise which Mr. Roosevelt lauds in the past and seeks to cripple in the present. It is well "to dream dreams and see visions." It is also important to accomplish something constructive towards making them come true.

Another Ox Is Gored.

Representative Blanton has been on the neck of Washington for a number of years. On frequent occasions his attempt to "ride" the District in this position has caused a good deal of mirth in the House of Representatives. Of late, however, Mr. Blanton has been on the neck of the House, and that produces an entirely different reaction, as the enthusiastic applause of Mrs. Norton's attack upon the Texan on Monday proved.

On three successive District days Mr. Blanton has kept the House in turmoil by his filibuster against the rent-control bill. Instead of speaking his piece against the measure and letting it stand on its own merits, he insists upon blocking the legislation by resort to roll calls and lengthy explanations of his own gentlemanly qualities, calling to mind Shakespeare's observation that it is a mistake to protest too much.

Through this calculated sabotage of procedure the House has been extremely long suffering. But it could not ignore the gentlemanly threats to invade the district of Mrs. Norton, chairman of the District Committee, for the purpose of defeating her in the coming election. When such an attempt at intimidation is added to Mr. Blanton's filibuster against a bill in which he is personally interested as a Washington landlord, the House has ample reason for irritation.

Congress has been very tolerant of Blantonism as long as it appeared that he aspired only to be a dictator over Washington. The same tactics, applied to wreck the conduct of business in the House, is a different matter. But they may help to create a better understanding of what the District has patiently endured so that this Congressman's "gentlemanly instincts" can have free play, in agreements affecting the Police Department and otherwise.

Divided Budgetary Control.

Washington citizens do not yet fully understand the yardstick which the Budget Bureau applies to local expenditures recommended by the District Commissioners. But they do see more clearly why there is so much confusion over the District budget. With the Commissioners striving to obey regulations laid down by the Budget Bureau and the bureau passing the buck to the Commissioners, only a miracle could bring about a satisfactory program of expenditures.

If Director Bell is accurately quoted by members of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations, the Budget Bureau spares local institutions from the pruning knife only when the Commissioners put up a scrap. Mr. Bell insisted that budgetary items are subjected to searching study. But that statement is critically weakened by the alleged admission that appeals from the Commissioners are a controlling factor. If the Budget Bureau were thoroughly familiar with the deplorable condition of Washington's hospitals, public health service, penal system and to some extent the schools and Police Department, it should not be necessary for the city fathers to make a special fight for adequate appropriations.

The intimation that the Commissioners should conduct a special demonstration to save the indigent sick of the Capital City from inhuman treatment puts the local budget-making procedure in a truly farcical light. At the conclusion of extensive hearings on the needs of the community, the Commissioners trim all departmental requests to what they consider a minimum and send their list of recommended expenditures to the Budget Bureau. In spite of this careful preparation, the Federal budget makers assume that the heads of the local government have exaggerated their estimates, unless they make a special fight to retain some items.

At the same time the Budget Bureau issues rules that forbid any effective protest from the Commissioners. They are told not to submit supplemental estimates unless new legislation has been passed, imposing financial obligations upon the District, or unless an extreme emergency has arisen. It appears that the Budget Bureau has subjected the Commissioners to criticism because they abided by the bureau's rules.

Irresponsibility thus reaches a point that is close to being intolerable. The Commissioners are denied control over their own budget, and that obligation is not assumed by the Budget Bureau. It would be absurd, of course, to suppose that this frustration of executive leadership in the District could be offset by the exercise of unreasonable authority on the part of a Federal bureau which apparently does not give the city fathers credit for sincerity. Difficulty enough arises from obsolete division of authority between Congress and the local government. The need is for less and not more interference from the Budget Bureau.

As Director Bell pointed out, it is not the duty of the Budget Bureau to reform this archaic procedure. Only Congress can do that. But Mr. Bell's appearance before Senator Thomas' committee has so clearly demonstrated the advisability of completely divorcing the District and Federal budgets that further delay in making the change would be inexcusable.

The Traffic Bills.

Four bills will be submitted this week to the Senate District Appropriations Committee to extend the authority of the local Commissioners in traffic matters. This year has seen an unusual number of officials and citizens studiously applying themselves to the problem of making the city's streets more convenient and safe. The traffic bills are intended to give effect to their efforts.

Each of these measures commands the support of the community. An increase in the maximum penalties for reckless driving is proposed: none will object to more severe punishment for such offences. Another measure calls for semi-annual inspections of motor vehicles. With hard times keeping many an automobile on the road long after it should be on the scrap heap, the need for inspection is plain. However, adequate safeguards should be included in the bill to make certain the inspection does not become a racket.

The establishment of a magistrate court to handle minor traffic cases is also suggested: the present state of the overcrowded Police Court is all the argument needed for this. The fourth measure would properly empower the Commissioners to prohibit driving in Washington by persons holding permits from other jurisdictions after they have violated local regulations.

The bill further provides for the appointment of a Congressional committee to investigate the wisdom of extending the system of staggering the hours of Government employment as well as shifting the tardy bell in opening public schools. Some relief from rush-hour traffic might, thus be obtained. The advisability of limiting the number of taxis in Washington is not open to doubt. But the Public Utilities Commission should be granted discretion in the matter to allow for changing conditions. The provision to regulate parking lots can stir little debate. It should be supplemented, however, by some plan to increase off-street parking facilities at reasonable rates.

Unfortunately, it is proposed to hitch these traffic bills to the District appropriation measure, presumably as a means of insuring their quick passage. Such strategy cannot be logically defended. The provisions of the bill have little, if any, relation to District appropriations. Why should it not be submitted in the regular order, to pass or fail on its own merits?

Displaced Railway Labor.

The negotiations between railway managements and the rail unions, over the question of dismissal compensation for employes displaced by mergers or co-ordination of facilities, apparently broke down completely last week. A spokesman for the roads indicated that the limit of concessions had been reached but to no avail. The labor group confirmed this statement and added that it would press for passage of the Wheeler-Crosser bill to secure legislative protection against unemployment resulting from the execution of economy plans. Fortunately, as on previous occasions when it seemed as if a stalemate had been reached, negotiations have been resumed, though the outlook for voluntary accord is by no means bright.

There is no dispute as to the justice of demands that labor should be given protection against the undue hardships resulting from the co-ordination of railway facilities. The roads have accepted the principle of employe protection, although they are not willing to grant as much protection as the unions demand. Under the circumstances, it should be possible to reach an agreement without resort to legislation which would substitute a rigid and complicated administrative procedure for the flexible arrangements that are greatly to be preferred.

Early in March President Roosevelt made a strong appeal to railway management and labor to work out a reasonable plan for the protection of displaced workers as a matter of self-interest. He warned them that if they could not agree, and "legislation is sought as the only solution," the effect might be to discourage and prevent progress, invite litigation and embitter employer-employe relationships. The President's remarks showed plainly that he does not approve the Wheeler-Crosser bill as a legislative substitute for voluntary agreements.

Under that bill it would be necessary to secure the approval of the I. C. C. before carrying out plans to reduce or consolidate railway facilities, in addition to making provision for workmen displaced by approved plans. Not only would intolerable delays be encountered, but the result might be to "freeze" railroad service and employment at its present level. Certainly the intricate administrative procedure would greatly hamper the efforts of the roads to cut their operating costs and increase their competitive efficiency. Such outcome would hold little long-run promise for increased employment.

Unemployment resulting from mergers gives rise to permanent displacements, whereas layoffs due to seasonal recessions or periods of bad business are expected to be temporary. This latter form of unemployment is taken care of under the social security act, although Coordinator Eastman is urging passage of a measure that would establish the insurance system on a unified and somewhat different national basis for transportation workers.

This latter proposal may well be discussed on its merits, but it should not be confused with dismissal compensation plans. It is obvious that the terms and conditions of payments incident to dismissal must be carefully adjusted to avoid placing intolerably heavy burdens upon the roads. Otherwise, while some may be temporarily protected, unemployment as a whole will only be increased.

The Love Of Wonder.

Constantine Demerdjis, a premier in whose hands was said to rest the immediate future of his native Greece, died on Easter Monday: the obituary notices were lengthy. On the same day died Howard Thurston, a master conjurer—and of him the obituary notices were still longer. The world admires the statesman, but for the mystery-maker there is a love universal and timeless.

Our most primitive forefathers looked for marvels—and discovered them. Today the savage looks for and discovers them, while the most tutored men seek them just as assiduously. In this respect, the difference between the civilized and the uncivilized is entirely superficial.

To the happy savage, every sunrise is a miracle, whereas millions of sad sophisticates hold that there can be no miracles anywhere. These men take their stand upon the unprovable hypothesis that all phenomena must possess a "natural" explanation—and yet they will pay well to be shown tricks the explanation of which eludes their intelligence. Illusions are accepted as nothing more than illusions, but the extent of the cynic's appetite for them is evidence of his regret for that long-lost day when there was scarcely anything which was not "miraculous." Even the unbeliever wants to believe.

You have to admire the nerve of radio amateurs. On a recent evening one of them tried to play the bagpipes, despite the fact that Scotchmen have been trying to do this for centuries and have always failed.

Fascism At Home.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
There is much variance between Granville Hick's interpretation of an American fascistic attack on the organs and institutions of democratic culture and Sidney Olson's review of "The Brown Network," in The Post last Sunday. One is inclined to flip a coin—heads, you have fascism in America and tails, you don't. This may not be a very logical or reliable test, but it seems superior to Mr. Olson's intellectual straddling-the-fence act as opposed to the objective dissection of the state of American culture by Mr. Hicks.

It is hard to understand how Mr. Olson was able to scan over two-score newspapers and a number of magazines of all types without coming across a favorable reference to Hitlerism or the Nazi government "of any sort." Certainly, the annals of American journalism should record this feat in a manner more durable than the medium of newspaper columns. Granted that a large amount of Nazi propaganda is handed to the American public in a most subtle manner, it still remains a fact that the Sage of San Simeon has never hesitated to present pro-Nazi and pro-Fascist propaganda in his newsreels and newspapers in a far from subtle manner.

Of course, it is quite possible that good, clean journalistic ethics prevented Mr. Olson from touching the San Simeon press, but even that should not hide from his eyes the fact that in many large American cities there are active Nazi agents who are optimistic enough to wear their well-known uniforms in that touching executioner-brown shade. Indeed, the rituals and sadistic orgies of Nazi officialdom have long been the foundation of Southern culture and government, and to a lesser degree the foundation of that business-like internal Yankee imperialism of the North.

A less discerning mind than the one possessed by Mr. Hicks should be able to realize that the problem is not how to combat a future American fascism—but how to remove the fascism we now accept as the highest development of democracy. JAMES HARRISON.

"Gladly And Cheerfully."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Resolved, that we, the Pittsburg Townsend Club No. 1 of Pittsburg, Kans., in regular session assembled on April the 6th 1936, hereby reaffirm our faith in and allegiance to the old-age pension plan founded by Dr. F. E. Townsend, and regardless of any and all technical disclosures that may appear from the Congressional investigation of the plan we shall remain loyal to and keep out (sic) confidence in our great humanitarian leader, Dr. F. E. Townsend.

We gladly and cheerfully place our driblets of money into his care and keeping and we shall not hold him responsible for any misplaced judgement in men or methods of procedure. He accomplished a great work worth many times over the whole sum of our contributions.

The responsibilities placed upon our leaders were enormous and exacting. What errors and confusion should occur in the management of an institution of such gigantic and rapid development might well be expected even under the best of organized business methods.

We believe a public investigation of the Townsend old-age pension plan, paid for by public funds, should not be biased and one sided or if it were a grand jury seeking only criminal intent, an enterprise of such extended activities and having for its objective a great public service is entitled to a higher rating than that of a common graft and should be accorded an honest, open hearing without prejudice.

Before The Irish Confetti.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Mr. Babcock's able billet re the need of buying power, called forth by the profound opus "How to Live on $1,440," moves me to suggest that—

The graphic facts behind strictures like "How to Live on $1,440" be scrutinized and digested before the Irish confetti is heaved.

It be remembered that only Government has the strange faculty to boom on roaring deficits.

Divers government hands join the U. S. to get a perspective; loud squawks being out of order in any jobholder lucky enough to ride the depression.

All hands throttle present discontents in deference to the little gink in the rusty derby and lean purse, who foots the freight and notches his belt to keep 'em in office—Mr. Hard-Socked Taxpayer.

The youngster with a government job, realizing his bulge over outside pals may, by letting the high life and expensive motors wait, assure his future. No debate—open or otherwise. Living proofs within a stone's flip of my desk.

While labor may have been too suppliant in the dim past, a few ambitious reforms be left to transpire after, not before, recovery.

Employe bureaus first launch onslaught against abuses within. Flagrant cases of family, political, married combines, to the prejudice of distributed buying power. And bend energies, not to political pressure, but to reduction of current congestion of nags, numbers and pool runners; whereby coin would be salvaged sufficient to put all aged on a Townsend basis and keep migrated cotton pickers happily doled.

This wisdom be taken only in a mildly carping spirit—but—

Employment's Lag.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
In every line we hear of better prices and increased production. In shoe manufacturing, in the automobile business, in the textile mills, in the iron and steel foundries and in fact, in practically every legitimate form of enterprise we learn of improved conditions. Stocks have advanced to highs comparable to those before the depression. Bank reserves are the highest in history and the farmer is receiving better prices for his products and through agriculture adjustment his purchasing power has been stimulated greatly.

Associated with these advances in our industrial and agricultural fields there still remains one problem of very great importance to our people socially and economically—that of unemployment. In round figures we have approximately 7,000,000 to 8,000,000 still without work. If business is so improved why haven't these men and women been able to find work? Why hasn't business through the increased marketing of its goods been able to absorb these jobless? Is it because of a flaw in our economic system somewhere?

If this be true, shall we keep these unfortunates through relief agencies or establish a different system of economics? This is a problem which we should give much attention to and through solving will make a great step toward a wiser, nobler and happier social order.

Sightseeing Classes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The mental state of timid citizens who visualize a red ogre seated on the teachers' desks of the public schools is hard to understand. In the matter of protection against any possibilities of the insidious seeding of un-American ideas in the public schools, Washington has one great advantage over other communities. The display of historic memorials here gives character to an environment in which influences antagonistic to Americanism should find it difficult to hold a place.

In order to make the most of this advantage what I would call sightseeing classes, as an essential part of the curriculum, should be established in the public schools of the District. Without seriously interfering with the present schoolroom routine the outdoor activities of these classes, conducted at practicable intervals, could be made to serve as a recreational source of Americanization, the effect of which would be lasting. I would likewise suggest that, on special occasions, parent-teacher sightseeing classes might be advisable.

To Radio's Credit.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Reports from steamship, railway and tourist camps are to the effect that the number of people who traveled this past year far exceeds that of last season. Indications are that the figures will mount this coming summer.

It is my opinion that radio, with its national breaking down of geographical barriers by means of music, can take a good deal of the credit for this. Lectures by world-famous travelers, radio dramas and all the sessions devoted to the music of strange lands have captured the imagination of potential tourists and inspired travels in this country and abroad. Perhaps by inspiring these visits and the concomitant interchanging of customs and culture, music may yet become a very vital factor in the cementing of international good-will.

Defacement Of The Parks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The new deal which the park-juggling landscapers have declared against a rampant citizenry goes merrily to its finale—meaning they win. Their motto is drive out the scallawags, i. e., the folks that used to find pleasure in dawdling about the parks. Cursed with kindness from every angle, and yet we protest peevishly!

Mr. Gartside's recent words on the subject are hardly reassuring; rather are they a confession that these areas will cease to masquerade as parks to become pawns in the paws of the enthusiastic handmaidens.

The ticket for poor Old Franklin has been writ. A strenuous face lifting, a rubber stamp of New Lafayette in the main, revolutionary in motif, as to misplaced speedways called walks. Benches—not perforce of granite—will abut thereon, though the same effect might be obtained by viewing the passing scene from an inverted bathtub placed flush with the street curb.

Now it might partly mitigate the crime to make those highways less rambling, else some plastered revocation candidate is likely to forget his whereabouts and deposit his car in some bench-sitter's lap.

The fact that dropping most of the walks will provide as much acreage for cultivation as B. D. (before defacement) does not dim the glory. One kick against New Lafayette is the wide-open-space liberality of those concrete swaths. Is this prime boner past correction in the case at court, the plans past hope of change? J. WINSTEAD.

The Post Impressionist

Post Office, Wednesday.

WE recently wrote:
"When you say 'Ballet' nowadays, you mean the Russian Ballet."

And that is just what we meant. But perhaps we ought to have expanded our meaning.

* * *

The Russian ballet wasn't built in a day—or in a century. The Post-Impressionist's own opinion is that it didn't attain its thoroughly national character—an international delight—until close upon the end of the last century.

* * *

As early as 1675, the second Romanoff Czar encouraged the ballet—but in a French form. Westernizing Peter the Great, who tried to do everything himself, essayed to be his own ballet-master: a Gallic type. Even the Empress Anna, his niece, brought in a Frenchman, Lande, to fill that post—an Italian, Areja, as composer and conductor—while girls and boys of the proletariat were fitted for the ballet, and given a general education, at the imperial expense, thus beginning the world's most famous ballet-school: the Teatralnia Oulitza. Catherine II imported that excellent martinet Didelot, but the Russian ballet, if as good as anything of the kind in western Europe, still remained Western-European.

* * *

Noverre had bethought him of narrative through pantomimic dancing; Camargo and Vestris had made their separate entrances and exits. The corps de ballet went to war, as a corps in Napoleon's Egyptian army, the further to awe the Mamelukes and help win the Battle of the Pyramids.

Almost with the dawn of the Eighteen Hundreds, Swedish-born Italian Marie Taglioni, Countess des Voisins, catholicized the art. Befere Carlotta Grisi—with Gautier and Henie for collaborators—had made it lyric, passionate Fanny Elssler, of Vienna, the arabesque, brought it to the White House while still Van Buren lived up there on Pennsylvania avenue. When Fanny danced in Washington, Congress adjourned—to watch her.

* * *

Soon, however, came bad days for the dance in the west.

Wagner's evening-star rose over the twilight horizon, and, sublime though it was, it nearly drove the ballet from the opera. Berlioz's popularity also delivered a blow.

* * *

Oh, yes, there lingered on something called ballet-dancing! But there was no ballet. Not really.

For the real ballet, "the dancing, the music and decour must be informed by a single spirit"—and that spirit the best. Stage-dancing in occidental Europe, not to mention this country, ceased to be beautiful and significant. It became, at its best, merely pretty and meaningless—at its worst, awkward and grotesque.

* * *

Not so in Russia. There the ballet not only held its own; thanks to the autocratic rule of Petipa, the Slavic dancers were achieving at least classical perfection.

What though this first great Russian ballet-master was a Frenchman born? His reign began in 1847; he lived until 1910, and during his ascendancy were "born and bred" Trefilova, Kchessinska, Preobrajenska, whom America never saw—and Pavlova and Karsavina, whom America both saw and loved. If there had been no Petipa in Russia, there might never have been a Diaghileff to take the Ballet Russe out of Russia and give it to the rest of the world.

Anyhow, there was Diaghileff, a genius, and there was his choregraphic chief, another genius: Fokine.

* * *

There, also, was much more:

There was the national character, the national attitude, and the national aptitude. There was the governmental subsidy and control. There was the reappearance of the male dancer, who, in the west, had been the only ballet-dancer until 1681, yet who had all but disappeared in the Nineteenth Century. And there was the Teatralnia Oulitza theory of terpsichorean education: the meticulous selection, the ruthless weeding-out, the long, the painstaking, the ardent training as much of the lesser material as of the pupils most likely to rise to leadership.

* * *

With all this to help them, Diaghileff and Fokine brought the classic tradition into touch with life. In 1908, Fokine conquered his native land through the performance of "Eunice." In 1909, Diaghileff opened his first Paris-season—and international success was almost at once assured. A few years thereafter, he and his general-staff—Nijinsky, Karsavina and Blom—received the surrender of the United States. Now, although the governmental Russia that gave it birth is dead, the Ballet Russe has created, outside the Russia which today lives inside Russia, a Russia which has conquered the stage of the world.

* * *

So that's what we intended when we said:

Fair Enough

The Stewards.

One of the minor wonders of the world, which presents itself to all passengers on the ocean boats, is the politeness, efficiency and discipline of the corps of stewards who serve the meals and perform the combined duties of chambermaid, companion and male nurse in the staterooms. Here is a trade which offers a man a menial position in life in return for small pay, plus tips, and yet requires good manners and patience under all conditions—always with the understanding that in time of peril he shall offer his life to protect the patrons of the line.

He may be set on the beach out of a job on short notice, and frequently does find himself lopped off the pay roll. And to see him serving the caviar and duck and hear him suggesting expensive little trifles to tempt th eappetite of his passengers nobody would ever suspect that the steward is forbidden to sample the food which he handles with such elegant poise and personal indifference.

• • • •

At meal times he takes his station with his uniform neatly pressed and brushed, his hands scrubbed white and his whiskers shaved and greets his people with a courteous smile which reveals nothing of the contrast in his own condition. He has been fed on stew or spaghetti and bread and cheap cheese and cheap wine, and the quarters in which he sleeps and spends his hours off watch, though not exactly a slum, compare with the first-class accommodations about the same as a laborers' section of a city compares with th ehomes of the aristocracy.

During the hours when the passengers don't see him he is working hard scrubbing floors, polishing silver and setting tables for the next meal. In port, while the ship is being turned around, he may have a few hours' liberty ashore, sometimes an overnight pass, but he also has plenty of work, and in case of a quick turn-around he may not get a chance to go ashore at all.

The room steward is a little more fortunate in the matter of food, for even though he, too, is supposed to live on the mess provided for the ship's company, he has certain opportunities to obtain passenger food which are not enjoyed by the other members of the crew. If the passenger orders four lamb chops the room steward may raise it to six and hide the two others somewhere, wrapped in a napkin until a favorable moment when he hides in a stateroom and gives them the attention they deserve.

I discovered this winter that a passenger, having the right to order all the food he wants to within reason, may do one or more good deeds a day by asking his room steward if there is anything he would like for himself. Very often the steward is able to think of something which is not provided in his mess. He sets it aside with a polite "Thank you" until his passengers are served and then enjoys his stolen meal—which is very wrong of him, to be sure, but good for him, nevertheless. I recommend this form of wrongdoing to persons riding on the boats.

The room steward's job is not very trying in fair weather, but the winds do blow at times, and their task of easing the torture of passengers who feel resentful against fate, life, the elements and the stockholders of the steamship company is one which need not be described in intimate detail. At such times the steward becomes a nurse as well as a flunkey, and, being no more than human himself, he must have many wretched hours when he would prefer to find some quiet spot himself and give himself up to his misery. Yet I have never known any steward to shirk his job or to reveal to the passengers in his care any hint that he has troubles or interests of his own.

Shipwreck is rare, of course, but it is always possible, and the steward thus is a potential sacrifice, for in such hours he is not a servant any more but a sailor with very manly duties set out for him and bound by discipline to control his fear, do his work and set an example for the passengers. This may happen on one of the frequent voyages when there are not enough passengers to go around and he, personally, is without clients and sailing the sea for only his base pay, which, in all tip jobs, is not much better than nominal.

Arms And Class War

Britain's Rearmament Places Conservatives Beside Fascist States While Man In The Street Looks To Geneva.

By Edward Acheson,
Special Correspondence to The Post.

London.

The most circumspect of political prophets would be perfectly safe in predicting that the "national" government in Great Britain will put through its armaments bill, largely because there isn't anything to prevent its going through. And its passage will constitute a great victory for the Conservatives. It will be "one in the eye" for the opposition, pictured grinding its teeth in impotent rage. And it will put the realists back in the saddle, binding the Tories together as closely as the most exacting boss could desire.

By every dictate of party politics it will be a great victory. And very possibly a fatal one. From the point of view of the existing political system as a whole, it bears all the earmarks of ultimate disaster. For it serves to inject a stark reality into political divisions upon the nominal quality of which depends the stability of the great democracies. Nor is this observation a mere cynicism. When the political label "Democratic" came irretrievably to stand for the reality "slavery," and "Republican" meant "abolitionist," the American Civil War was practically inevitable.

In England the ruling class has been meticulously careful not to permit real issues to arise. Hence the twin anomolies that most of the "reforms" have been sponsored by the Conservatives, and the justifiable generalization that a radical in office becomes more reactionary than a Tory.

• • • •

The question of reopening the armaments race—which is generally admitted to be the inevitable outcome of the present policy—departs markedly from this traditional and wise practice. It inexorably allies the people of wealth, the capitalists, not only with a political party to which they habitually belong, but with an international war-breeding system. Alternatively the workingman becomes the real champion of the League Covenant, and the League of Nations emerges as a Socialist ideal. Thus the Conservatives tend to align with the great Fascist states, Germany, Italy and Japan, leaving the English workingman, with 11,000,000 Peace-Ballot voters, looking to Soviet Russia and Geneva.

Such a cleavage is, obviously, very wide, very dangerous and very real. And immediately it raises two fundamental questions. There have been armament races before—why didn't society divide itself in exactly this way on previous occasions? And secondly, why, with the peril so apparent, has the matter been permitted to reach this advanced stage today.

In 1911 Sir Edward Grey prophesied that the initiation of the armament race of his time would lead either to revolution or war. It led to war without even a threat of revolution. But the England of 1911 and that of 1936 differ widely in attitude toward the inevitability of war. In 1911 there was no alternative such as the League of Nations, and only the foggiest conception that the possession of great armaments might be itself a cause of war.

So deeply rooted is the latter idea that the advocates of great armaments have found it wholly impossible to achieve their goal without asserting that England must be capable of fulfilling her responsibilities under a system of collective security. But the very size of British rearmament is a denial of the government's belief in the efficacy of the League. Which squarely presents the second of the two questions—how has it been brought about?

Certainly not by the expressed will of the people. No one, I think, questions the importance of the Tories' support of the League in the last election. Without lip-service to Geneva the present government would have been roundly beaten. But Mr. Baldwin knew that. He also knew that trumpeting collective security and muting the increase in arms would disorganize the Opposition, giving the Labor Party no point of attack since he was advocating their own platform.

Immediately after the voting, Mr. Baldwin's actual rather than election attitude toward the League was demonstrated in the Hoare-Laval proposals. Defeated in that direction by the anger of the country at large, he achieved his original end of preventing oil sanctions by instructing Mr. Eden "to take no initiative." His political genius is shown by the fact that the Opposition is still impotent: Mr. Baldwin is still verbally true to the Labor ideal.

Exactly the same strategy has been applied in the matter of arms. The Labor Party as a whole advocated the maintenance of an army, navy and air force which would be adequate under a collective system. This is what Mr. Baldwin says he is about to provide. And the Opposition, having agreed in principle, finds itself "merely haggling over details" when it objects that the greatest navy in the world, plus an air force larger than the combined strength of any two European nations, might be somewhat of an embarrassment of riches to any collective peace system.

But the government by its crablike procedure, apparently heading in one direction, moving steadily in another, is successfully achieving both its aims, a speedy return to the balance-of-powers politics on the Continent and the huge armaments which are a function of that theory. The real danger to the internal stability of the country lies in the degree of this achievement. Insofar as it becomes clear to the rank and file of the Socialist Party that its present moderation is rendering it futile, exactly to that extent will radical counsels prevail. The government will carry this day, and easily. But the victory wil become grimly Pyrrhic if it forces a real issue on the Opposition which has been striving so manfully to appear conservative and respectable.

The twin fictions of adherence to League principles and "filling in the gaps in the national defense" cannot be long maintained in the face of a failure to apply effective sanctions and an appropriation of a billion and a half dollars for armaments. Sooner or later the working man is bound to discover that he has been "had," that the Labor leaders in Parliament have been tricked into acquiescence, and that the only remaining course is "to organize the masses for refusal to fight or to work for this government in any war on any pretext."

With such a decision the cleavage would be complete and the political parties would become permanently grounded in social antagonisms: wealth, nationalism and armaments on one side; labor, socialism and the League on the other. To prove that the encouragement of such alignments would be foolhardy in the extreme, both socially and politically from the capitalist and Tory points of view, it is only necessary to point out that "the most dangerous and dreaded radical in England," Sir Stafford Cripps, has spent five violent years in trying to bring about exactly that alignment.

Policeman Fined For Striking Boy

Manning Clagett, a Capitol policeman, was fined $25 by Judge Robert E. Mattingly yesterday when arraigned on a charge of striking 15-year-old Paul Grooms, son of a Metropolitan policeman.

The charge was placed against Clagett when young Grooms complained to his father that Clagett struck him while he was playing on the grounds of the Capitol March 29. Judge Mattingly criticized the policeman for using "more force than necessary to evict the young boy from the grounds."

Clagett pleaded not guilty to the charge, although he admitted hitting the boy when he took the stand in his own defense. Grooms said the man struck him while he and some friends were playing on the west steps of the building.

Flier Chases Bomb, Lives to Tell Story

Hamilton Field, Calif., April 14 (AP).— An Army cadet grew so interested in seeing whether his aerial bombs hit the target in practice today that he followed one down—and lived to tell it.

The cadet, J. A. Philpot, 22, leaned over the cockpit to watch each dummy projectile speed earthward.

He leaned too far, and fell overboard.

From an altitude of 2,000 feet he sped down in pursuit of the bomb.

No End Of Books

By Theodore Hall

Wild And Woolly.

Some 20 magazines, blossoming gayly on the newsstands, are filled from cover to cover with tales of how "Bud" Mulligan, of the Tumbling-K Ranch, loosened his six-shooter in his holster, dug spurs into his pinto, and set out to perform violent retribution upon the person of "Hatchet-Eye" Boggs, of the Doodle-Bug outfit. Or tales very like that. With the sole possible exception of detective stories, Western fiction is our most popular brand. It is said that these magazines have a combined circulation of over 3,000,000.

The West has given us another species of fiction which, if not so lushly popular, is quite as hardy. The reverse of the Western romantic coin is the farm saga, dour, laborious, conscientiously grim. Hamlin Garland's "Main-Traveled Roads" is an example, as are Rolvaag's "Giants in the Earth" and Herbert Quick's "Vandemark's Folly." Anderson's "A Story Teller's Story" and Lewis' "Main Street" merely exhibit the same characters moved to town. The novel of the soil is still with us.

These two streams of literature flow out of a region which, in the maps before 1840, was named the "Great American Desert." This does not mean the Desert of Utah and Nevada; it means that vast and treeless area surrounding the Rockies, broad and undulating as the sea, which we call the "Great Plains." What that region was like, what kind of life went on in it and what effect it had upon the course of this country—these form the massive and absorbing theme of Walter Prescott Webb's book, "The Great Plains" (re-issue; Houghton Mifflin, $5).

West of the 20-inch rainfall (from eastern North Dakota straight to the Panhandle of Texas) lay a new world for the pioneers. They had come out of the forest. Was the awe and excitement they felt any part of that racial memory, suggested by J. Barrell and Henry F. Osborn, of man's ancient birthplace on the plains of central Asia?

But the strangeness was quite enough in itself to provide these emotions. Here were new animals—the buffalo, the prairie dog (the forest man had to give it this odd name, not conceiving of a squirrel living in the ground), and the jackrabbit. Here were new Indians, more backward and savage than any the pioneers had known. Worse, they were mounted (even the farthest tribes on the Canadian border had horses by 1780), and such was their swiftness and accuracy with arrows that the single-shooting rifle dear to Kentucky became an all-but-useless toy. The wisest scouts, in those early days, never tried to gallop away from the Indians; they stayed and fought, and kept the last bullet for themselves. Then Colt, in 1835, invented the utterly new machine, the six-shooting revolver, and the tide was turned.

Just as new were the methods of living when man settled on the plains. "In this country," said the plainsman, "we climb for water and dig for wood"—referring to the necessity of climbing the windmill to turn the wheel by hand, and of digging for mesquite roots. Law itself had to be changed—the scant 160-acre homestead law, proper only to the East, had to be got around somehow; water-rights were made over; the justice of the peace was the man with the quickest holster-draw.

Cattle was a kingdom in itself. The drives and the round-ups, the Chisholm, Pecos and Abilene trails, the wars over water-rights and fences, and the new life of the range of these are strands in the tapestry Mr. Webb weaves.

Clearest is the figure of the cowboy. Being Easterners, we think of him thus, as Mr. Webb puts it into our mouths: "Ah, here is a new species of the genus homo . . . He lives on horseback, as do the Bedouins; he fights on horseback, as did the knights of chivalry; he goes armed with a strange new weapon which he uses ambidextrously and precisely; he swears like a trooper, drinks like a fish, wears clothes like an actor, and fights like a devil. He is gracious to ladies, reserved toward strangers, generous to his friends, and brutal to his enemies . . . There is something romantic about him."

From the salty cowboy life to the geographical and historical factors which made that life, from the real force of the introduction of barbed-wire in 1874 to the mysteries the great plains pose us, Mr. Webb takes his careful, lucid, and extremely interesting way. He is a student, not a fiction writer. But next time you pick up a copy of Triple-X Western or Lariat Stories, you will remember Mr. Webb's "The Great Plains" and understand "Bud" Mulligan and "Hatchet-Eye" Boggs rather better. And the novels of the soil won't seem like fiction.

Cummings Urges School for Aids

By the Associated Press.

A training school for United States attorneys, marshals and their assistants has been recommended to Congress by Attorney General Cummins to tighten up law enforcement in Federal courts.

In the beginning, the school would specialize in concentrated courses in Federal legal procedure to selected groups from among the Nation's 1,500 Federal officials directly concerned.

Justice Department officials hope, however, gradually to expand the instruction course into a permanent institution designed to introduce men into the service.

McNair Gives Speech From Back of Steer

Pittsburgh, April 14 (AP).—Mayor William N. McNair pulled himself astride a longhorn steer today and orated five minutes to a crowd in front of city hall. Wearing a cowboy hat and puffing a cigar, he shouted, "They should elect me to Congress with a hat like this."

Pen Women Hear Brown Deny Possibility of Air Censorship.

Radio censorship was described as unknown in this country last night by Thad H. Brown, Federal Communications Commission member, before the National League of American Pen Women.

He told the national convention of several hundred women in the Willard Hotel that the act setting up the radio-control organization specifically prohibited censorship.

The commission, he added, does not and could not discriminate against stations by refusing to renew licenses, because the law provides for "full and complete hearings."

He hinted of "great and enlightening" things to come in the radio field.

Transmits Micro-Wave.

"Engineers," he said, "have developed a radio transmitting station small enough to fit snugly into a coat pocket, with the power supply batteries in another, having a total weight of less than 5 pounds.

"It operates in the micro-wave band of one meter or 300 megacycles, with a power of only two-tenths of a watt. It has a range for voice of up to 4 miles."

Already by using such equipment, he said, it is possible for a man to broadcast a conversation in an office building upper floor to a friend in an automobile on the street.

Television Nearer.

Radio enginees, he said, have accomplished a great deal with television and will conduct a series of new and important tests June 29 in New York City.

Aiding in developing the educational phases of radio programs was urged by Mrs. Ruth H. Ottaway, president of the National Council of Women and former president of the National Federation of Music Clubs. She was unable to attend, but her speech was read by Miss Jessie MacBride.

Mrs. Ottaway said she did not wish the radio to become "highbrow."

"We do believe, however," she said, "that the element which deliberately seeks the lowest stratum in other branches of entertainment can be ignored completely over the radio.

Resents the Scrpfulous.

"We further contend that scrofulous material which is presented in the guise of comment to bewildered morons has no place on the air.

"There are always psychiatric clinics, court of justice, ministers, priests and rabbis to whom a troubled soul may turn for pactical aid or proper advice."

Several chain stars appeared on the "radio forum" entertainment program.

One of the high points of the convention will come Friday with a concert at the White House, the music composed by members attending the convention. Mrs. Roosevelt will receive the women in the east room at 4:30 p. m.

Interior Cornerstone to Contain Everything From Coin to Paper

Photograph of Ickes, Bible and Flag Among Articles To Be Placed in Copper Box Tomorrow; Roosevelt Scheduled to Speak.

An autographed photograph of Secretary Ickes, a telephone book, a Bible, a pamphlet on the Constitution, a silk American flag, a batch of reports on Congressional hearings—these are but a few of the items that will be placed in the new Interior Building's corner stone when ceremonies are held tomorrow morning.

April 16 is a red letter day on Ickes' calendar and, according to plans announced yesterday, he is overlooking nothing in attempting to make the corner stone laying exercises at 11 a. m. tomorrow something to be remembered.

President Roosevelt is scheduled to speak.

The Marine Band will furnish music.

The invited guests will be ushered to their seats by CCC enrollees.

In laying the corner stone, President Roosevelt will use the trowel wielded by President George Washington when he laid the Capitol corner stone in 1793.

Frederic A. Delano, the President's uncle, will be master of ceremonies.

And, getting back to the corner stone itself, it will shelter a copper box containing—to quote the Interior Department—"a file of documents sufficiently varied to give archeologists of the future a comprehensive close-up of official duties and civic accomplishments carried on in the year 1936 by one of the largest departments of the Federal Government."

Besides the articles already mentioned the copper box, which had to be made to order, will house a bronze medallion of President Roosevelt, miniature drawings of the new building, service monographs of the Bureau of Mines, Office of Education, Reclamation Service, National Park Service and Office of Indian Affairs and a historical outline of the public land system.

Also a copy of the current Congressional Directory, laws relating to the National Park Service, the booklet called "Glimpses of Our National Parks," newspapers, coins, copies of the act appropriating funds for the new structure and the department's latest annual report.

Health Session Urges Streams' Pollution Rule

Control Division, With $1,000,000 Yearly Appropriation, Asked.

Establishment of a stream pollution control division in the U. S. Public Health Service was recommended yesterday by the thirty-fourth annual conference of State and territorial officers as they closed a two-day meeting.

The plan provides for a 10-year antipollution program which would cost the Federal Government $1,000,000 a year. Of this amount, $700,000 would be made available to State governments and private enterprises for the purpose of building sewage treatment plants. Grants would be made to States, loans to private business.

The remaining $300,000 would go toward administrative and other expenses of the division. Passage of State pollution laws and the creation of interstate compacts also would be encouraged by the plan, which has been placed in the form of a bill to be introduced at the present session of Congress.

A proposal to prohibit the floating of oysters or water storage of oysters in natural estuaries was referred back to committee for further study as the result of opposition by Drs. R. H. Riley, I. C. Riggin and J. Lynn Mahaffey, health commissioners of Maryland, Virginia and New Jersey, respectively.

President Roosevelt received the delegates yesterday morning. They were led to the White House by Dr. Thomas Parran, jr., Surgeon General of the Public Health Service.

Woman's Death Sends Car Toll To 29 for Year

Injuries Prove Fatal to Mrs. Heinrick; Licenses of 6 Revoked.

An autopsy performed yesterday disclosed that Mrs. Caroline Heinrick, 61, of 1114 E street southeast, died of a wractured skull received when struck by an automobile April 1. Her death raised the traffic total to 29 for this year.

Mrs. Heinrick was knocked down while she was crossing Pennsylvania avenue southeast, between Eleventh and Twelfth streets.

An inquest will be held at 11:30 today, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said. Harry G. Berkeley, of 18 Eighteenth street southeast, driver of the car that struck Mrs. Heinrick, will appear.

Eugene Roberson, Negro, 1100 block Columbia road northwest, also will appear at the inquest into the death of Leonard Murphy, Negro, 39, of 1924 Seventeenth street northwest, who died in Walter Reed Hospital Sunday, after being struck April 4 in the 2600 block Georgia avenue.

Driving permits of six motorists were revoked and 21 other licenses were suspended for speeding yesterday after a meeting of the revocation board.

Those who lost their permits are Sylvester Hay, 4265 Washington place northeast, 54 miles; Frank C. Kipple, Naval Air Station, 50 miles; Joseph R. Lucas, 1905 Seventeenth street southeast, 50 miles; Percy Marshall, 1910 Eighth street northwest, 50 miles; Harry L. Eubank, 802 Tenth street northeast, 54 miles; James N. Toney, 68 U street northwest, 54 miles, second offense.

Suspensions for 30 days went to Carl G. Allen, Williamsport, Pa., 48 miles; Henry Harps, 123 K street northwest, 42 miles; Fred Jilison, 1810 California street northwest, 45 miles; Hugh C. McCully, Hyattsville, Md., 40 miles; Everett E. Norton, Arlington, Va., 42 miles; Salvind O. Olson, 915 Shepherd street northwest, 42 miles; Russell W. Samuels, Alexandria, Va., 45 miles; Ralph L. Steelman, Fort Myer, Va., 46 miles; Jack C. Thoman, 238 Emerson street northwest, 44 miles; Samuel M. Tompkins, 1229 Michigan avenue northeast, 46 miles.

Foes Score Roosevelt Talk

of 'social pioneering' which gets them nowhere," he continued.

Fletcher agreed everyone would like to see shorter hours and higher wages, but pointed out the President did not explain how they could be brought about "unless through an autocratic government to be installed if he should be re-elected."

Cites Use of Troops.

The Republican chairman also charged that "in ordering troops of the Regular Army to participate in the parade (preceding the Baltimore speech) the President introduced another innovation patterned after the European model." He pointed out that the troops could not have been escorting the President, because he was not in the parade.

Bolton declared that the President had "lashed industry to do a job of economic reconstruction which the policies of his Administration have made it impossible for industry to accomplish." He declared that the first step toward solid recovery must be liquidation of New Dealism."

Referring to the President's labor proposals, Shouse said:

"If Mr. Roosevelt seriously intends to carry out the proposals of that speech he must be prepared to recommend to the county a constitutional amendment that would sanction them."

"Phrase Making."

Otherwise, he said, the President was indulging merely in phrase making for political purposes.

"It would seem that Mr. Roosevelt proposes the revival of the NRA scheme of Federal control over labor conditions without enlightening the country as to how he intends to carry out his proposals and without daring to risk the political consequences of outlining the necessary constitutional amendment," he added.

Former Senator Reed's statement was made in a speech to the Lawyers Association of Kansas City last night.

"I unhesitatingly say that our march away from constitutional government and toward the swamps and morasses of communism, bolshevism and fascism, from liberty to tyranny, has been more rapid than similar revolutions in Russia, Germany and Italy," he said.

He said the only protection afforded American liberties is the Supreme Court.

Referring to NRA, he said:

"Under this plea of necessity, a law concocted by brain-trusters, some of whom were better known in Russia than in the United States, was rushed through practically without debate.

"Nothing done by Stalin, by Mussolini, by Hitler, was more drastic, more brutal and more destructive of liberty."

Representative Hope (Republican), of Kansas, in a radio speech, said that the Administration has failed because of an inability "to find economic or administrative leaders who possessed ability in those lines comparable to the ability of Mr. Farley and others in the field of politics."

Meanwhile, in New York a committee of former Kansans was organized to co-ordinate activities of Landon-for-President groups in ten Eastern States. The Associated Press reported that Eastern headquarters will be opened in New York in a few days. Brock Pemberton, New York theatrical producer, was named chairman of the committee.

Urges Expense Cuts.

Former President Hoover's statement suggested as means of restoring "long-time confidence:"

1. Reduce Government expenses.
2. Balance the national budget.
3. Establish a "real currency."
4. "Stop these movements and threats of inflation."
5. "Stop these other activities which destroy confidence in the future."

In connection with Roosevelt's hypothesis for limiting working ages, Hoover said that in 1930, "when employment was fairly good," there were about 1,000,000 wage earners over 65 years old and about 1,100,000 persons under 17 employed in factories and business.

Anderson Named Virginia PWA Head

President Roosevelt sent to the Senate yesterday the nomination of James A. Anderson to be Public Works Administrator for Virginia.

Anderson has been serving as acting director for PWA since it was decentralized with the abandonment of the old organization headed by a State committee under a regional director. The new director joined PWA when it was originated, as the State engineer.

His salary as director will be $6,000.

Police Asked to Hunt Missing Girl Student

Margaret E. Garner, 16-year-old high school student, was reported missing last night by her mother, Mrs. Marie Ritter, of 20 Lincoln avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Mrs. Ritter said the girl had been missing since morning. She said Miss Garner had had several arguments with her steffather, John Ritter, and had threatened to run away. She had $1.25 in her pocket.

In at least two cities—Atlanta and New Orleans—the Railway Audit & Inspection Co. and the Federal Laboratories had their offices in the same room, Blankenhorn declared.

Blankenhorn read into the record a denial by E. E. McGuffie, president of the National Corporations Service of Youngstown, Ohio, that his firm furnished labor spies. Blankenhorn described the company as an affiliate of the Railway Audit & Inspection Co.

"I have confessions," he said, "of three stool pigeons hired by McGuffie and planted in the Goodrich, General and Firestone (rubber) plants."

Upon questioning by La Follette, Blankenhorn said the "confessions" were obtained by a union committee in Akron, Ohio, and that it was impossible to obtain affidavits because "after their exposure, the spies left town."

Blankenhorn said that of 13 men arrested with Groves during a St. Louis strike (unnamed) in 1932, 7 were returned to other cities as "wanted criminals."

Blankenhorn told the committee that Federal Laboratories had been refused a detective license in Atlanta because the chief of police feared "it would create disturbances."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and James J. Bambrick, leader of the recent New York City elevator strike, urged the committee to recommend a thorough Senate investigation of labor espionage.

Green said there had been a "malicious, cancerous growth" of espionage and attempts to break unions in the past year, paralleling the anti-union drive of 1920-21.

Bambrick said an agent of a strike-breaking group had tried to prolong the walkout after a settlement was proposed.

"These people don't want industrial peace," he said. "They want strikes."

Murphy Outlines Legion Objectives

New York, April 14 (AP).—J. Ray Murphy, national commander of the American Legion, tonight expressed "strong confidence that adequate neutrality laws and a universal service act, both of which are mandates of the American Legion, will be enacted by this session of the Congress and will be approved by the President."

In an address here, the commander outlined objectives which he said were next in line for the organization now that the bonus payment objective has been obtained.

"The voice of America," he said, "calls us to a campaign of militant Americanism, it summons us to a program of peace, it commands us to carry forward our great child welfare activity, it directs us to throw the full power of our strength into a battle to make American highways and streets safe places for human life and limb, it points to community service that must be done and it directs us to devote ourselves to the care and protection of our ever dependent wards, our disabled comrades of the World War."

How a Baby GROWS

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

MANIPULATION: The baby uses his hands (and mouth!) to explore and sometimes to pull apart the physical world. In the five pictures below, the baby is shown, at the left, investigating a new and strange object by putting it in his mouth. The second, third and fourth pictures depict further infant investigation by prying, handling and ceaseless examination. Even during the bath period, the baby continues to satisfy his curiosity concerning new things he discovers in the new world about him. Tomorrow: LANGUAGE.

Alcohol Blend For Motor Fuel Held Feasible

Chemical Society Debates 'Farm Gasoline' Versus Petroleum Product.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, April 14.—The United States Bureau of Standards today stepped into the "battle of motor fuels" between farm and oil chemists at the American Chemical Society with a new finding that it is possible to use satisfactorily a gasoline-alcohol blend for autos, but that engines should be redesigned to get the maximum benefits of the proposed "farm gasoline."

The bureau's report was made by Dr. Leo M. Bridgeman. It was the first announcement, he said, of the bureau's recent studies of this controversy.

The Midwest is the battleground and this meeting of the American Chemical Society the beginning of a fight to put alcohol from farm products into gasoline through commercial enterprises, the first of which is expected to be announced tomorrow night.

See Farmers Losing.

On one side of the Farm Chemurgic Council of the Chemical Foundation, Kansas business interests and a few concerns which are selling gasoline mixed with alcohol. They hold that if customers like the mixture of 10 per cent alcohol with present gasoline, a potential 30,000,000 acres of farm land may ultimately be put to raising crops to produce the extra alcohol, and that 2,000,000 jobs also will be created.

The oil chemists reply that cost of motor fuel will be raised; that farmers themselves, being big users of autos, may not get much benefit from their fuel crops, and that if alcohol blends succeed with the public, the alcohol will probably be made cheapest from sources other than crops.

These arguments were brought out in a symposium on alcohol-gasoline blends.

A fuel which can refrigerate food in a delivery truck and operate the engine simultaneously was described today to the society.

Can Aircool Buses.

The fuel, propane, was said by A. Ludlow Clayden, Philadelphia research engineer, to have a lower consumption average than gasoline and can be adjusted so as to reduce the carbon monoxide exhaust virtually to zero.

Tests have proved it can cool the air in buses and can keep air conditioned trains in operation while in the railroad yards without the usual obnoxious odors.

Clayden predicted great possibilities for the fuel if scientists succeeded in devising a desirable engine for it—something between the conventional gasoline motor and the Diesel engine.

Fresh advances through chemical laboratories toward safer and more efficient anesthetics for operations were reported today to the society by a Mayo Clinic authority.

Butterfly on Lip.

Achievements listed by Dr. John S. Lundy included:

Metycaine, both antiseptic and injectable, coming "the closest to giving the clinician a good all-around preparation of any that I have yet seen."

Revival of vein-injecting anesthetics by the recent appearance of two short-acting barbiturate compounds.

Dr. Lundy explained how a butterfly of cotton is fastened to a patient's upper lip just below his nostrils, adding to the safety of administering an anesthetic. The anesthetist watches the motion of the cotton as he works.

Old Home Is Added To Exhibition List

The home of Col. and Mrs. William A. McCain, declared one of the best examples of Georgian architecture in Washington, has been added to the list of houses to be inspected Friday for the benefit of St. John's Church.

The house at 3337 N street northwest, has a historic background. James Buchanan lived in it before he became President. In 1824, Col. John Cox, mayor of Georgetown, entertained Lafayette there during his last visit here.

Nine houses will be open for inspection Friday and nine on Saturday. Tickets may be purchased at the Mayflower, Willard and Dodge Hotels and the American Automobile Association, Mills Building, or at any of the houses visited.

Col. Frank Knox, Chicago newspaper publisher, seeking delegates to the Republican National convention in Illinois primary yesterday, is shown as he cast his vote.

State-wide campaigns which failed to bring him victory in the face of Democratic landslides in 1932 and 1934, ran as a foe of the New Deal and as a spokesman for that section of the Republican party which aimed its attack at the Administration in Washington.

Though Gov. Alf M. Landon did not enter for the Illinois Presidential preference vote, a few voters in Chicago precincts "wrote in" his name.

Early returns from the Republican senatorial contest sent Otis F. Glenn far ahead of former Congressman William E. Hull, of Peoria. Glenn, a former United States Senator from Illinois, was holding a 3-to-1 advantage.

Though the election in Chicago was marked by some violence in river wards, the five persons reported kidnaped were all later reported in their homes. Apparently the abductions were to keep some workers from the polling places. The Horner forces claimed that most of the alleged intimidating was directed against their adherents.

Outcome Is Advisory.

While Knox and Borah were matched in the preferential Presidential balloting, the outcome was advisory only, as delegates go uninstructed to the national convention.

Fifty delegates were chosen from each party today. Democrats will select eight additional delegates at the State convention May 1 at Springfield, and the Republicans seven more at their State conclave the same day at Peoria.

Congressional nominees generally remained in doubt tonight long after the trend in other primary races was indicated.

Races True to Form.

Returns were slow on the congressional races. Poll officials fought their way doggedly through lengthy ballots and, because of the interest in ticket leaders, deferred counting the congressional ballots.

Chicago's First District, with a preponderant Negro population, gave Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, Democrat, the only Negro Congressman in Washington, a substantial lead on the first few precincts to report. The Republican candidates were led by Louis B. Anderson, who overshadowed Oscar De Priest, former Congressman. Both are Negroes.

Mrs. Bertha Baur, Republican National Committeewoman, took a commanding lead over four other aspirants in the ninth district, also in Chicago. Representative James McAndrews, Democrat, also had a sizeable lead over his single opponent.

Edgar J. Cook, State chairman of Senator Borah's campaign, charged in a statement tonight that a "campaign chest totalling $500,000" was used in behalf of Col. Frank Knox, Borah's opponent in today's voting.

Knox Says Expense Low.

Col. Knox previously has said that not more than $25,000 was expended by his supporters and that the funds were contributed in small amounts by his friends.

At the same time, Cook asserted he was "happy" over the result. Knox was far in the lead on the basis of incomplete returns which mostly were from Cook County. Cook said:

"I am indeed very happy over the result in Illinois. It is remarkable that without any organization support whatsoever, and with funds limited to practically nothing, and with 99 out of 102 county organizations indorsing Mr. Frank Knox, and a large campaign chest totaling approximately $500,000, Senator Borah should receive such public acclaim. It is evident that Senator Borah is by far the popular candidate. The Republican Party can win with him. Otherwise it will die as the Old Whig Party died. These votes came from the hearts of the electorate."

Landon Written-In.

Lincoln, Nebr., April 14 (AP).—A strong write-in vote for Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas for the Republican Presidential preference was indicated in first returns of Nebraska's primary election tonight.

In four Lincoln precincts, 60 persons wrote in Landon's name to 95 persons who voted for Senator William E. Borah, whose name appeared on the ballot. Six persons wrote in the name of former President Herbert Hoover and three the name of Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago.

Senator Edward R. Burke took a 2,744 to 1,732 lead over former Representative Dan V. Stephens for Democratic national committeeman. Former Representative Terry Carpenter who with Stephens criticized Burke for voting against several New Deal measures, was third. Burke denied disloyalty to President Roosevelt.

Gov. R. L. Cochran led Anton H. Jensen, 7 to 1, for renomination on the Democratic ticket, and Dwight Griswold, newspaper publisher, was 2 to 1 ahead of his nearest rival for the Republican gubernatorial nomition. If Griswold wins, it will be his third consecutive nomination for the office.

J. C. Quigley, chairman of the Democratic State committee, had an easy lead for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator. Former Representative Robert G. Simmons was 5 to 1 in front of his closest rival for the Republican nomination. Only four write-in votes for Senator George W. Norris, who did not file for renomination, were reported.

N. J. Slogans Ruled Out.

Trenton, N. J., April 14 (AP).—A slogan, "Best Man to Beat Roosevelt," adopted by many candidates for convention delegates pledged to United States Senator William E. Borah for the Republican Presidential nomination, was dropped from the May 19 primary ballot today under a ruling of Attorney General David T. Wilentz.

Wilentz, questioned by Secretary of State Thomas Mathis on the right of candidates to use slogans, said the election law "nowhere discloses any provision which would authorize such a practice." The law, Wilentz said, permitted a slogan only where the person was a candidate for public office, whereas a candidate for convention delegate sought a "party position."

The ruling resulted in the dropping of many slogans, including that of George Kiehl, of North Bergen, Republican delegate-at-large candidate, who filed "for Landon, against Hoffman-Hague collusion." Gov. Harold G. Hoffman is a candidate for delegate-at-large.

Airliner Lost Wing, Crashed, Inquiry Is Told

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 14.—The Department of Commerce committee investigating the crash of T. W. A.'s Sun Racer, heard testimony today that the sky liner's wing ripped off before the ship plunged onto a mountainside near Uniontown, killing 12 persons.

John A. Collings, of Columbus, Ohio, superintendent of T. W. A.'s Eastern division, testified that Nellie Granger, the hostess and one of the survivors, told him:

"I am positive the right wing ripped. Then the plane shuddered as it will do in rough air."

Collins added that Miss Granger said after the crash last Tuesday:

"About 10:02 or 10:05 a. m. I went to the cockpit, but neither pilot had anything to say.

"Then I went to my seat in the rear. I looked out and saw the ground. It looked close, but we did not seem particularly low."

The little hostess, who carried word of the crash and a plea for aid from the desolate mountain top, still is in a Uniontown hospital.

He said "everything was routine until Flight No. 1 (the wrecked ship) became overdue."

Williams told of another plane, also en route from Newark to Pittsburgh, flying about a minute behind the wrecked ship and landing in Pittsburgh at 10:33 a. m.

John A. Hultquist, radio operator at TWA's Pittsburgh terminal, said the Sun Racer, meanwhile, had asked for landing instructions, saying it was 10 miles east of the airport and flying at 3,000 feet.

Dennis Mulligan, counsel for the investigating committee, asked whether the ship acknowledged instructions. Hultquist replied:

"He (one of the pilots) didn't repeat them back; he just said 'Okay,' but that's all they ever say, normally."

Koenig died also.

Court Bars Dynamite Diet in Horse's Oats

Montreal, April 14 (AP).—Joe St. Jacques was ordered today to give up dynamite treatments for his horse, which suffers from asthma.

Recorder Leonce Plante instructed him to get rid of any dynamite he might have and also to return to court in custody of his wife, who had complained that Joe used the explosive for more than the horse's treatment.

"He threatened to throw some at me," she said, "and he choked and beat me."

"What happened to the horse?" asked the recorder.

"It is much better," interdupted St. Jacques, explaining that he pulverized the dynamite before feeding it in oats to his horse. "It relieved his asthma and made him go much faster."

Finnish Training Ship In Distress Off Brazil

Rio de Janeiro, April 14 (AP).—The navy ministry announced receipt of a call for assistance from the Finnish training ship Suomen Joutsen tonight.

The message said the ship was off the coast near Rio de Janeiro with its engines stopped and was threatened with drifting against the rocky shore.

Several tugboats were rushed to the ship's assistance.

With spring triumphant over last week's chilly rains, the Stone Villa is carrying the usual seasonal "clean-up" a step further—to remodeling the entire establishment to twice its former size. During alterations "business is going on as usual," with Vic Whitsell and his band supplying the music.

At the Lotus Restaurant, the spring revue, headlined by Manno and Stafford, with their sensational ballroom dances, has been held over by popular demand. Other reasons for the "repeat" engagement are Bobby Del Rio and his partner, Rita the Doll; the music-comic Aurette sisters, and—of course, those old standbys—Al Norton, Judy Ellington, Bill Strickland and his Capitolians.

A riot of whirling arms and legs will greet visitors at the Maryland Club Gardens, where blonde Margaret Black does her incredibly fast dances in the modern manner to the blue rhythms in the style of Duke Ellington. Held over for their fourth consecutive week are Alma and Roland, the "stormy-weather" dance team.

Tables Go Fast.

Ralph, the head waiter at the Club Habana, telephoned us yesterday afternoon to say that the table we requested for last night's show was the last available reservation.

"What with handling capacity crowds every night I'm beginning to feel a bit like a strong-arm bouncer," remarked Ralph. Maybe the reason for the crowds is the dance team of Dorothy and Gilbert, featured at the club. Music by Guy Scott's Orchestra is an added explanation.

Host Barnett at the Dude Ranch called to inform us that he intends to hold weekly after-hour meetings of the "Swing Club," which only musicians and their friends will be permitted to attend. The doors will be closed to us "common people," who can't even carry a tune . . . Its always open house at Brinkley's to a trio of harmonizing youngsters who have been dropping in regularly and "striking up" for the guests. The youngsters come and go as they please, not being on the pay rolls, but Brinkley's seems to be their favorite haunt. Perhaps its the dance music of the Brinkley Aces.

Kitty Nursing Sore Throat.

Phil Metz, a High-Hat regular, tells us Kitty Simons will soon be singing her "Some of These Days" at the Ambassador's High Hat Club with her accustomed gusto. Troubled with a sore throat, Kitty is taking a special preparation gotten up by Phil, which he guarantees will restore her voice better than new. In the meantime, she is whistling over the mike in accompaniment of the Paradise Islanders and giving the guests an eye-full with her new, novel costume, high hat, long tails and white tie of baby blue satin and jewel cloth that lends an impression of "italics" to her figure.

Russian Communists may not celebrate Easter, but their kinsmen at the Russian Troika more than made up for it at the party for the help last Saturday night, after the guests had flown, my impresario Helen Hamilton . . . To quote Jimmie Byrd of the Mayfair, "Somehow or other we survived the cherry blossom rush of visitors even though they had us going night and day."

They call the Three Yates Sisters "starlets" and when you see them dance and hear them sing at the Shoreham Hotel this week you'll agree the description fits as well as their costumes. Local girls who have made good, the Yates sisters performed at the President's first birthday ball. Other features of the floor show are Bert Granoff, the Capital's "home" tenor, Ventriloquist Ray Conlin and his inseparable dummy, Maxim Lowe's orchestra, and that lovely lady who sings as they play, Jayne Whitney.

Amateur Contest Ends.

Consuelo Flowerton, who won in over the hearts of Heigh-Ho Club patrons at her last visit to Washington, is being brought back for a "repeat" with a brand-new collection of songs . . . "The Great Ziegfeld" is only a few days old, but Sidney's musicians at the Mayflower are already playing the song hits from the movie. The boys also are reviving some of the old-time favorites of the great Ziegfeld shows.

Spring Takes Over Night Club Floors

On the Air Today

New York, April 14.—There must be hundreds of persons in this city who know nothing of a definite and positive character about television. And specifically of the developments of the last few months which led to the Radio Corporation of America's announcement last week that field experimentation in television would begin in June.

But just try to find some one who speaks with any degree of authority. One man who knows what is going on in radio here will tell you the television laboratories in the Empire State Building are just now being completed. Another will look at you wisely and say that so much secretive progress has been made that David Sarnoff himself would not be permitted behind the closed doors over there.

Officials of R. C. A. advise you that nothing of consequence is to be seen at the Empire State laboratories, but shudder in the next speech at the idea that anyone would want to be admitted. Among the few statements of fact emianating from R. C. A. is one to the effect that television will not be ready for home use for a long time to come. This, obviously, is to protect the retail dealer who already knows what can happen to his business if the public gets the idea television is just around one of these corners we hear so much about in business.

Very Dangerous!

The current reason the visiting writer is refused admittance to the laboratories is based on the tragic death of an engineer last week—a man engaged in work preparatory to the field experiments scheduled for June. You are "warned" that the whole business is very dangerous indeed! The press department of R. C. A. also explains that several good articles on television have been written in the course of the past winter and that nothing can be added since.

It is generally understood, among those who keep in touch with radio matters here, that television is still something of a phantom so far as practical use is concerned. R. C. A. is proceeding along its engineering lines and the Farnsworth laboratories in Philadelphia are shooting for the same objective along lines of their own development. As a matter of fact, if experimentation this summer should include transmission in metropolitan New York or Philadelphia by both R. C. A. and Farnsworth, the person receiving would require two types of receiving sets due to differences in the two types of television engineering.

Most WRC listeners will remember the name of Paul Monroe, who was a member of the N. B. C. announcing staff in Washington until last fall. I ran into Paul in the C. B. S. studio yesterday. He is now engaged in production work for the Columbia network and tells me that his assignments now include the Sunday night "Hour of Charm"—the all-girl program under the musical direction of Phil Spitalny.

As a member of the production staff he has a hand in more than a dozen shows.

Culbertson on Bridge

"Cincinnati, Ohio.

"Dear Mr. Culbertson:

"A hand came up the other night in a local club that has threatened, in its reprecussions, to tear the foundation out of the building. The club has split squarely into two factions, one bearing the proud device, 'finesse,' the other just as loudly shouting 'go up with the ace.' We already have passed the stage of betting our shirts (even the chef has put down a small wager), and now are entering the secondary, or belligerent stage, wherein fist fights, instead of prosperity, are just around the corner. As the leading pacifist of the group I have prevailed on the scrappier element to call a truce until the hand can be submitted to and analyzed by you.

"May I beseech you, in this tense hour, to give the matter your careful and urgent attention? Yours very truly, E. J. C.

This was the hand:

North, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable; each with part score of 40.

The bidding:

3 spades	4 clubs	4 spades	Pass

Mr. E. J. C.'s letter further stated in a postscript:

"The bidding, whether good or bad, is not in question. The point to be decided is the declarer's proper play on the opening lead, by West, of the duece of diamonds."

My answer was as follows:

First, I should like to congratulate West on his opening lead. It was a model of bridge sagacity, both in the suit selected and the particular card calculated to deceive declarer.

Now, as to declarer's proper play, certain premises must be clearly established. The first is that East, for his aggressive vulnerable bidding, must hold the heart ace and the club king. Furthermore, East cannot hold eight hearts because he would have rebid them several times before showing clubs. He cannot hold seven because that would leave West with only a singleton, and he certainly would have opened it. Therefore, South's king of heats is not in danger.

If dummy's ace of diamonds is played, and it holds the trick, the contract is, of course, safe. But if it is ruffed, declarer still must lose a heart and a club.

If the queen of diamonds is played and it holds, all is well, of course. Now we come to the real crux. What if it loses to the king? And we find that no material loss will result! The ace always is good for that vital club discard! The same thing applies if East ruffs the queen of diamonds. In short, the one way for the contract to be defeated is to go up with the ace and have it ruffed!

I assume that that was what happened!

Miss Miller To Be Bride Next Month

Will Become Wife of Capt. de Balzo, Italian Cavalry Officer.

An engagement of interest to members of Capital society is that announced today by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Joyce Miller, of New York, of their daughter, Miss Frances Marion Miller, to Capt. Don Luciano del Balzo, son of Duchess Maria del Balzo, of Capri, Italy, and the late Duke Antonio del Balzo.

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William John Miller, of Washington. On her mother's side she is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Saunderc, of Cleveland, Ohio. She is a descendant of Mary Clark, whose uncle, Dr. John Clark, went to England to obtain the Great Charter of Rhode Island. Miss Miller, who is also a descendant o fJohn Alden, belongs to the Society of the Colonial Dames of America.

On her father's side, her antecedents include the late Senator George Read, from Delaware, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and the late Monsignor John Norris, who was for many years at the American College in Rome. Several years ago Mr. Miller was decorated with the Order of the Commander of the Crown of Italy.

Miss Miller attended Miss Spence's School, New York, and was graduated from Miss Porter's School, Farmington, Conn., later going to Paris, where she spent a winter at finishing school with Mlle. Paula Imbrecq. The bride-to-be was presented at the Court of St. James in June, 1924, and the following winter was presented to society in New York by her parents.

Miss Miller has been a frequent visitor in Washington as the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Charles A. McKenney, and is also a niece of Mrs. Edward Everett Rapley, of Washington.

Mrs. Miller and her daughter sailed for Naples, Italy, several weeks ago to make final arrangements for the wedding, which will take place in Italy early in May. Mr. Miller will sail April 25 aboard the Conte di Savoia for Italy to give his daughter in marriage.

Mr. Buckingham Is Married Here To Miss Bierer

Rev. Warner Officiates at Ceremony in Chapel of Cathedral.

Bethlehem Chapel, of Washington Cathedral, was the scene of the marriage at high noon yesterday of Miss Dorothy Roberts Bierer, daughter of Mrs. Bion Barnett Bierer, 3708 Quebec street, and the late Capt. Bierer, to Mr. David Randall Buckingham, son of Dr. and Mrs. David Eastburn Buckingham, 3108 Hawthorne street. The Rev. Charles T. Warner, rector of St. Albans, performed the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Lieut. Bion Barnett Bierer, jr., U. S. N. Her gown of white lace was made with a high neckline, sleeves puffed to the elbow and close-fitting below, coming to a point over the hand, and a skirt which fell in a long train. She wore a tulle veil caught with sprays of orange blossoms and a short face veil, and carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Her matron of honor and only attendant was Mrs. Howard Campbell, of Akron, Ohio, who was dressed in a high-waisted frock of pink organza with a cluster of flowers at the neck and a tucked and corded bertha trimmed with small buttons from the neck to the waistline. The skirt was in corded disks flaring to the bottom. Her pink suede gloves were elbow length. Mrs. Campbell's flowers were arranged in an old-fashioned bouquet. The bride's mother wore navy blue, with a corsage of orchids, and the bridegroom's mother a gown of ashes of roses shade, with a large hat to match, and a corsage of orchids.

The chapel was decorated with Easter lilies.

Mr. Donald Buckingham, a brother of the bridegroom, served as best man, and the ushers were two other brothers, Mr. Wells Sacket Buckingham, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Richard Gilpin Buckingham, of this city; a brother of the bride, Ensign Howard Trautman Bierer, U. S. N.; Mr. William Wade Everett, jr., Mr. Francis Alden Murray and Mr. Edwin Mirick Graham, all of Washington.

The bride is a graduate of the National Cathedral School and has been an active member of the Junior League, in charge of the league's work for hospital clinics.

After a short wedding trip, Mr. Buckingham and his bride will return to Washington to reside. Her traveling costume was a gray suit with accessories to match.

Mme. Vargas Honored at Tea Given By Brazilian Ambassador and Wife

Mme. Getulio Vargas, wife of the President of Brazil, was honored yesterday afternoon at a tea given at the Brazilian Embassy by the Ambassador of Brazil and Mme. Oswaldo Aranha from 3 to 5.

The gowns of the guest of honor and the hostess were in artistic contrast, that of Mme. Vargas burnt orange with silver insets in the sleeves and diamond clips at the neck, and that of Mme. Aranha, a deep, brilliant blue. The colors also repeated those dominant in the furnishings of the embassy and in the pictures which arrest attention in every room. The fireplaces were banked with ferns and on the mantels were bouquets of American beauty roses which also formed the center bouquet on the tea table in the dining room. Large silver cocks at each end of the table were an unusual feature of the appointments.

Senorita Zazi de Aranha, young daughter of the Ambassador and Mme. Aranha, was greeting the guests and assisting informally, as was the Ambassador's sister, Senorita Lais de Aranha, who has been a guest at the embassy for some time. Senorita Zazi de Aranha wore a dress of navy blue with white piping and a white flower at the neck, and Senorita Lais de Aranha, an afternoon gown of powder blue.

Senator Arthur Capper, who was among the guests received a smile of recognition from Mme. Vargas when he arrived. He sat at her left at the dinner given at the embassy of Argentina Monday night but they could not converse as the Senator does not speak Spanish and Mme. Vargas speaks no English.

Assisting Mme. Aranha were the wives of members of the Embassy staff. They were Mme. Bueno do Pardo, Mme. Oscar F. Coutinho, Mme. Raul Reis, Mme. de Sousa Freitas and Mme. Fernando Lobo.

Official, Unofficial Washington Attend Season's First Ball Game

By Francesca M'Kenney.

"To the ball park," was the direction given to many chauffeurs and taxi drivers yesterday as thousands made their way to the opening game, where the President tossed the ball proclaiming the opening of the official baseball season.

By 2 p. m. the stands were well filled with an audience attired in spring clothes, which were brilliant in the bright sunshine.

The President arrived in the White House car with the top down, and as he was driven to the box received a cheer from the crowd. He was accompanied by his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, who arrived in the Capital yesterday in time to attend the game, as did Mr. Elliott Roosevelt. Mrs. James Roosevelt wore a deep wine and white printed gown with a straw hat to match, trimmed with a bunch of cherries, and a pale gray wool coat. Also with the Chief Executive were his naval aid, Capt. Wilson Brown, and his military aid, Col. Watson, and Mr. Marvin H. McIntyre.

As soon as the President and his guests reached their box the band played "The Star-Spangled Banner," while 30,000 baseball fans stood at attention.

Seated in a box close to the President was Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the late President Wilson, attired in black with a large black straw hat and wearing a corsage of flowers. Mrs. Wilson is a baseball enthusiast and never misses a game played in Washington.

Among those who arrived with the last-minute rush just before the flag was raised by Vice President Garner, were Admiral and Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Dr. and Mrs. James F. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Carusi, the latter wearing a smart ensemble of gray with a hat to match, trimmed with a small red flower, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Moran, the latter in an oxford gray suit, small black felt hat and an orange ascot.

Among those seen arriving early were Postmaster General Farley, Capt. and Mrs. William W. Galbraith and their son, Mr. George R. Galbraith, Gen. and Mrs. William Wright, Mme. Jacques de Sieyes, Mr. Reeve Lewis, and Mrs. Edmund Starling. Also Mr. Ord Preston, Mr. Moran McConihe, Mrs. David Key, Lieut. Comdr. Jerauld Wright, Mrs. John Reyburn, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan and Mrs. Horace Peters.

The wedding of Mr. William S. Carroll and Miss M. Sybil Bowyer took place yesterday, at the home of the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. William S. Carroll, 2716 Thirty-fourth street. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Z. B. Phillips, of Epiphany Church at 4 p. m. Only members of the immediate families were present.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George Randolph Bowyer, who arrived for the wedding from California, where they have spent the winter, and will leave shortly for England, where they expect to make their home.

Mr. Carroll and his bride will spend a short honeymoon in New York and then leave for Pensacola, Fla., where he is stationed as lieutenant in the Naval Reserve.

Mr. Carroll was graduated from Harvard University in 1929 and was a member of the Speakers Club there.

Scholarship Fund Will Honor Edison

New York, April 14 (AP).—Owen D. Young, chairman of the Thomas Alva Edison Foundation national committee, today announced final plans for a Nation-wide campaign to provide a "living memorial" to Thomas A. Edison.

The memorial, he revealed, is to take the form of at least 100 scholarships to be granted annually to young men and women throughout the country who have shown, either as students or as workers in industry, special aptitude for science and invention.

The campaign is being sponsored by electric light and power companies, electric manufacturers, motion picture and radio companies and other allied industries.

Eighty per cent of the funds, he stated, will go toward the scholarship endowment and the remainder will be used in erecting an Edison center at West Orange, N. J., to house the original models and replicas of Edison's inventions, and in creating a permanent memorial tower at Menlo Park, where the original Edison laboratory stood.

Dr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Are Honored By Society

Explorer Gives Wife Jeweled Plane Modeled After One He Used in Antarctic Flight; Will Go to New York to Get Ship.

An airplane formed of diamonds, with ruby lights and amethyst ski struts, decorated the lapel of Mrs. Lincoln Elsworth's blue suit yesterday at the luncheon given in honor of her and Dr. Ellsworth by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president and member of the board of directors of the National Geographic Society.

The little jeweled plane, the gift of her husband, was a replica in miniature of that in which he flew over the Antarctic. It was modeled after a photograph of the plane as it banked, and particularly pleased Dr. Ellsworth for the exact position of the ski struts. The propeller of the little jewel rotates like that of the real plane.

Dr. Ellsworth will go from Washington to New York, where his ship, the Wyatt Earp, will dock Sunday, bringing his plane.

"I named my ship the Wyatt Earp because that man had more influence on my life than any other individual. I have read Stuart N. Lake's book, 'Wyatt Earp, Frontier Marshal,' five or six times and have given copies of it to many friends. It has been a marvelous inspiration to me," he told one of the guests.

Died at Age of 80.

"Wyatt Earp, who saw ten years of border warfare and was one of the pioneer characters of Wichita and Dodge City, Kans., died a few years ago at the age of 80. His widow gave me his mother's wedding ring which was given him by his father after his mother's death, when he passed through his home in California on his way to Tombstone. His mother wore it as a pioneer in the early West; he wore it during his struggles on the border, and I wore it when I flew across the Antarctic."

Dr. Ellsworth will be accompanied to New York by Mrs. Ellsworth and will lecture there before the American Geographic Society, presenting the same lecture he will give tonight in Constitution Hall, illustrated with slides and motion pictures.

The large gathering included many distinguished persons, among them scientists, explorers and writers. The halls of the National Geographic Society building, where the buffet luncheon was served, were hung with mural photographs, some in color, showing scenes from all parts of the world.

Turquoise Necklace.

In a small case near the main entrance was a turquoise necklace of 2,500 hand-drilled beads, made by the Pueblo Bonita Indians and found on one of his expeditions by Dr. Neil Judd, one of the guests yesterday.

Dr. Matthew Sterling, the explorer who discovered the pigmies in New Guinea, also was present, as were Dr. C. G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and Mrs. Abbot; Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution; Dr. J. Howard Gore, professor emeritus of George Washington University, and one of the original members of the National Geographic Society; Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the United States Army Air Corps; Dr. Frederick V. Coville, botanist of the Department of Agriculture.

Dr. C. Hart Merriam, member of the National Academy of Sciences; Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, director of the National Bureau of Standards; Dr. George R. Putnam, former Commissioner of Lighthouses and Mr. George W. Hutchinson, secretary of the National Geographic Society; Mr. J. R. Hildebrand, assistant editor of the National Geographic Magazine, and Mrs. Hildebrand; Mr. E. John Long, of the editorial staff, and Mrs. Long.

Mr. Albert H. Bumstead, chief cartographer of the National Geographic Society and inventor of the sun compass which enabled Byrd to reach the South Pole, was there with Mrs. Bumstead and his son, Mr. Newman Bumstead, who also is a maker of maps.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Mme Getullo Vargas, wife of the President of Brazil, and Mme. Juan B. The Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, delivered a brief address commemorating the occasion, the sixth anniversary of Pan-American Day.

The music last night was varied in character, some modern in theme and none more rhythmic and melodious than the Cuban. Latin-American shoulders moved slightly in time as "Jungle Drums" was played and North American toes tapped lightly and heads inclined with the sway of the music.

Mrs. Roosevelt entered the Hall of Nations, where the concert was held, escorted by Dr. Leo S. Rowe, of the Pan-American Union, who also introduced Secretary Hull. The First Lady wore a gown of white satin brocade.

The Diplomatic Corps was represented by the Ambassador of Peru, Dr. Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Ambassador of Argentina, Dr. Felipe Espil; the Ambassador of Chile, Dr. M. Visitors From Mexico

Mexican Surgeon General's Wife Likes United States' Friendliness

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

An interesting but somewhat strenuous visit in Washington has been that of the last ten days of Senora Consuelo de Siurob, wife of Dr. Siurob, surgeon general of Mexico, one of the delegates to the Pan-American Conference of National Directors of Health. She has enjoyed her visit, the first she has made to the Capital, and has found the common language of friendliness one which may be understood whether English or Spanish is spoken.

Senora de Siurob expressed gratification when press dispatches announced a few days ago that the women of Mexico City had voted for the first time.

Senora de Siurob believes women, who represent half the population of Mexico and whose tasks are equal in responsibility to those of the men, with their entering into the professions and government employment, should enjoy the same civil rights.

"They should exercise the right to vote without abandoning their home interests," she said through her interpreter, for she speaks only a few words of English.

Devoted to Home.

"Their most important duty to the country is to bring up their children to be good citizens, but certainly, if men may vote who can neither read nor write, educated and intelligent women should have the right to do so. Those who are illiterate are as well qualified as illiterate men and can vote as they do, by color."

Dr. Siurob, who is physician, statesman and soldier, with two other deputies, drafted the law which, in 1918, provided a color should be used to designate candidates, as party emblems are used here, for the benefit of voters who do not read.

Senora Siurob has devoted herself to the management of her home and of her husband's business interests, allowing him to give his entire time to political and governmental affairs. She also has taken an active part in the campaign against alcohol inaugurated by President Cardenas and promoted by 1,000 committees in the country, co-ordinated by the National Council Against Alcohol.

She is a member of one of the committees through whose efforts barrooms have been removed from proximity to schools; 300,000 tons of sugar which was to have been converted into alcohol was used instead for food for cattle, and educational campaigns have been conducted in the interest of temperance and health.

Interested in Music.

Dr. Siurob maintains an orchestra in his department to provide music on radio programs devoted to this and other campaigns for public welfare.

Before her marriage to Dr. Siurob, Senora de Siurob was a teacher in the normal school in the state of Guanajuato. At the time she was a student there he was governor of the state and knew her but slightly.

Music is one of Senora de Siurob's chief interests and both of her young nieces, whom she and Dr. Siurob have practically adopted—having no children of their own—have been educated in music. One is preparing for a career as a singer, but the other, although she, too, is an accomplished musician, a pianist, is beginning the study of bacteriology, following in her uncle's footsteps.

Going to New York.

She also had with her a small vial of unset opals which had come from the opal mines in Queretaro, discovered by Dr. Siurob's grandfather, also a physician. The mines were known by the natives as the "Mines of the Doctor."

Dr. Siurob's grandfather, with a French physician, performed an autopsy on Maximilian after he was shot in Queretaro.

Sometime later he was called to attend a patient in the mountains and, coming down on foot, he picked up some stones in the path which he recognized as opals. He at once staked a claim and some of the mines he discovered still remain in the family.

Dr. and Mrs. Siurob spent yesterday in Baltimore and are leaving Washington today, expecting to spend a short time in New York before their return to Mexico.

Press Women Hear Gov. L. W. Cramer

Mrs. Wolfe Also Speaks at Weekly Luncheon.

The Governor of the Virgin Islands and Mrs. Lawrence W. Cramer and Mrs. James H. Wolfe, director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, were guests of honor yesterday at the weekly luncheon of the Women's Press Club at the Willard.

The Governor, who will be in Washington a week or two longer, spoke after luncheon on the work along social and economic lines done by the Administration in the Virgin Islands. The Government, he said, has spent considerable sums to make the islands attractive to tourists with the result that last year there were 11,000 visitors.

Mrs. Wolfe spoke briefly on the work women members of the Democratic Party are doing in preparation for the campaign.

Also at the luncheon was Miss Anne Martin, of California, first woman to run for the United States Senate, who is visiting in Washington for two weeks.

Women Hailed As Vital Force In World Peace

Women can play a tremendously important part in helping attain world peace, it was pointed out at the concluding session of the Catholic Association for International Peace at the Mayflower yesterday.

Both the Rev. John LaFarge, S. J., and Dr. Carleton J. H. Hayes, Columbia University professor, said that women, being closer than men to the youth of the country, could be a powerful educational force toward peace.

In previous sessions Dr. Hayes had termed the schools one of the strongest nationalistic influences. If education, he said, can produce nationalism it can also produce internationalism.

Proposed at the meeting yesterday was a world economic organization which would investigate international markets and currency. Gradually, it was considered, such an organization would evolve from a mere conference into an effective instrument to regulate world economic activity.

While no specific political recommendations were made at the meeting yesterday, the principles of collective security and co-operative defense were generally agreed upon.

At the morning meeting, Dr. John Meng, professor of international relations at Catholic University, urged regional organizations between countries as a preliminary step to world organization. He lauded the Pan-American conference recently proposed by President Roosevelt.

Dr. Charles G. Fenwick, political science professor at Bryn Mawr College, was re-elected president of the association. Dr. Kathleen M. Murphy, Latin professor at Fordham University, was named treasurer, and the following new vice presidents were elected: The Rev. Athanasius Karlin, professor at Victoria College, Kans.; Miss Mary Hawks, of Washington, former president of the National Council of Catholic Women, and Francis McMahon.

Art Work Is Found On Door at Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., April 14 (AP).—Harvard University gained a work of art today, but Nathan M. Plant, freshman, lost temporarily the door to his closet in old Stoughton Hall.

Painted on the door beneath several layers of green paint, officials of the Fogg Art Museum at Harvard discovered, were a turtle and a partridge—the work of William Stanley Haseltine, widely known painter of murals.

He lived for two years in the room now occupied by Plant while he was a student at Harvard in the class of 1854.

Museum workmen began to chip off the layers of green paint. When the painting was "recovered," they said, the closet door would go back to Plant's room, protected by a glass covering.

Chef Laments Food Ignorance Of the Fair Sex

Women Know Even Less About Eating Than Men Do, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 14.—A woman who knows how to eat is rare, said a noted French chef today, adding, "A lady is no lady unless she knows food."

Rene Durand—he has cooked for four kings—was distressed because: "Women know even less about food than men do. Their minds fail to grasp the idea of sauces.

"I don't think America will ever learn to eat plover's eggs," he lamented.

"Not that plover's eggs are the world's most luscious dish—I prefer a piece of cheese—but plover eggs are interesting.

"However, I fear America's preference will always be red meat. Steak and chops, with some lettuce."

Women would profit, he said, by conning a cook book "as part of their preparation for a sophisticated life—just as they study to improve their bridge game.

"But they should realize you can't become a fine cook unless you are a man, and began as a boy; you can't learn at 25."

He said a good cook is probably the world's most intelligent creature—"I never saw a good cook that was a dumbbell."

He once cooked in Biarritz for Edward VII of England, Alfonso of Spain, Carlos of Portgual and the Bey of Tunis.

Later he ushered the late "Diamond Jim" Brady, Lillian Russell and the Dolly Sisters into the old Sans Souci restaurant and Rector's, New York.

He recalled "Diamond Jim" as eating two dozen oysters, two mallard ducks and three asparagus portions at one sitting.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Advice Given in Specific Case Not Meant to Be Interpreted as Generality, Universally Applicable.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Ever since 9:30 o'clock of the morning of March 23, 1936, when I was reading your consistently excellent advice to people with problems, I have wanted to write and say I don't agree at all with what you told "B. J." on that March morning.

Mary Haworth.

Let's go back to your column of that day. A young chap has written to pose the query: Is it wrong for a fellow to "monopolize" a girl's time if he has no intention of marrying in the near future? Your answer was a pretty emphatic "yes." You said, among other things, that it wasn't fair to the girl, and that if the man isn't planning marriage he should beware of the path that leads to marriage; that path, you said, being contiguity and its attendant probability of love.

* * * *

I think you were pretty hard on "B. J." I can't for the life of me see anything especially wrong or unfair in seeing a lot of one girl, even if marriage isn't in the picture for a long time. Such judgment would deny friendships between men and women outside the marriage tie, wouldn't it? And would it not mean a sort of senseless sacrifice of good times with some girl whose company you particularly enjoy?

* * * *

Of course, I believe that neither boy nor girl should be deceived in any relationship between them. If both understand their association doesn't rest on an assumption of marriage, then I would say: "Carry on, my friends. If you both enjoy going to movies and dances and concerts, go to them by all means, and may God bless you." I ask you, Mary Haworth, in the words of a one-time popular song, "Is there anything wrong in that?"

I'm wondering, too, if you are on very solid ground when you suggest that a normal girl has included plans for marriage in her early twenties and hence, in a situation of much association with a bachelor-minded man, might be expected to use winning womanly ways to upset his contemplated state of singleness-for-a-while. Might it not be true that quite a number of girls do not view an early marriage as desirable?

* * * *

I can, naturally, see the danger of one of the couple falling in love with the other, who still wouldn't be ready for marriage. Books galore have been written around that situation. That eventually ought to be faced by any two people—one male, one female—who see a lot of each other. Then, facing it, let them go forward, realizing that disappointments may lurk along the path but prepared to feel some day the sting of life, which is, after all, a part of this business of living.

SPHINX.

The Point Made Here.

DEAR SPHINX: The thing you have failed to take into account, apparently, in appraising my remarks to "B. J." is this: I was dealing with a specific case in making reply as I did. "B. J.," who is studying to be a doctor, has ruled out marriage from his scheme of things for the next five years. For the past eight months he has been going exclusively with one girl, whose society he enjoys tremendously. He says, "I have no desire to ask this particular girl to wait for me, even supposing she would be willing to wait, nor am I at all sure I would want to marry her if she were willing to wait. Is it wrong and selfish of me to 'monopolize her time'?"

* * * *

The essence of my reply was this: "Since you are the one who is arbitrarily establishing the nature of the overt relationship—in other words, the one who says, 'this can never be more than friendship'—it seems to me you are honor-bound to play the game accordingly."

* * * *

It was "B. J.," not I, who introduced into the discussion the idea that "any normal girl of 22 may reasonably be expected to include marriage in her plans for the not-too-distant future." And it was he, too, who said: "In each case where I have gone with a girl regularly for any length of time, there has been the subtle intimation that if I were an honorable young man I would 'pop the question.'" My answer to this was: "Unless you do restrict your address to the sketchy, hit-or-miss attentions which characterize casual friendship, you can scarcely blame the girl if she acts on the assumption that an undercurrent of serious intent underlies your interest . . . Make it your business to find other companions . . . be candid about having other interests and make no secret of the fact that marriage has no place in your scheme of things for the next five years."

* * * *

I have no quarrel with your point of view, however. Persons who feel themselves capable of establishing their own standard of values; who can look at situations objectively and estimate them accurately; who, in cases of the kind described above, mutually concede that the pleasure of constant present association with each other outweighs any possible pain which may come of eventual inevitable separation further along the path of life, are surely entitled to act on the premise. The point I was making was this: play the game fairly, without any attempt to camouflage or evade the issues involved.

Poet Finds Joy In Efforts to Win 'Skeptics'

Miss Chapin, Here for Recital With Mr. Vinal, Talks of Work.

Like Edna St. Vincent Miller, whose interests were first divided between the theater and writing verse, Katherine Garrison Chapin (Mrs. Francis Biddle) poet, of Philadelphia, has had experience on the stage.

Now, however, Miss Chapin's chief interest is verse. For although she was reared in the tradition of the theater, studied acting in the original Theater Guild School and wrote one play, "The Tapestry of the Duchess" (produced in New York), she has spent the last few years writing poetry, lecturing on it and reading it in many Eastern cities.

In Washington to assist Harold Vinal in his poetry recital at the Phillips Memorial Gallery this afternoon at 5 o'clock, Miss Chapin yesterday termed herself a "self-confessed champion of modern verse."

Seeks to Convince Skeptical.

"Nothing interests me more than speaking to a group of persons who admit they don't care for poetry," she said. "They are the very ones I like to convince that poetry is not something apart from life, to be concealed between covers on dusty bookshelves. I enjoy, trying to show them it is a very vital and vivid way of looking at life. In novels, the favorite reading fare of the average man or woman, we escape into the lives of others. In poetry our own experience is enlarged and deepened."

Discussing modern trends in poetry, Miss Chapin pointed out that many oustanding versemakers today have discarded the forms of their immediate predecessors ("just as children rebel against some of the customs observed by their parents)." "Twenty years ago young poets who were to reach full bloom in the American renaissance revolted against the form of Victorian poetry," she said. "Now poets are revolting against subjects that have proved popular in the past. So we have verse writers going 'proletarian' in increasing numbers often interpreting life in its most sordid aspects."

She feels that poetry, to live, must appeal to both the emotions and the imagination and must be founded on vivid images; and that its form—whether free verse or not—should be decided by the subject matter.

Follows No Set Standards.

Her own poetry is modern in that it follows no particular standards, and is the direct expression of one woman's mind. The Yale Review wsa the first publication to accept her work. Later, when her poem "Nancy Hanks" was published in Scribner's, it attracted wide attention in literary circles. One critic, extremely impressed by the conclusion of the poem, suggested the last lines should be inscribed on the walls of the Lincoln Memorial as a tribute to Lincoln's mother.

She has two published collections of poetry. "Outside of the World" appeared in 1930. Three years later "Bright Mariner" came out in pamphlet form, with wood cuts by Wharton Escherick.

Chic Little Turban Made of Cellophane

Fashion Takes a Turn to the Make-Your-Own Vogue; Hat Making as Well as Dressmaking Is All the Rage This Season.

Fashion, like everything else in the world, repeats itself. Time was when a woman would have died rather than confess that the dress she was wearing was a home-made affair. And as for women who made their own hats—well, they were entirely outside the fashion pale.

Now, however, the make-it-yourself vogue has reached to the best-dressed circles. Not only are women knitting and crocheting their own dresses and suits but they are weaving and braiding their own hats.

The close-fitting little turban shown in the above photograph is marked for its chic, and certainly has none of that "homemade look." It was designed by Louise Sanders—creator of smart hats in Paris and New York.

This hat is suitable for all occasions and may be worn on the street, as well as at more formal events. It will appear well with any type of dress.

No matter how many spring and summer hats a woman may have, this little turban will be a welcome addition to the wardrobe.

The hat is crocheted of ribbon strips made of cellophane. These are draped into points on top. The little plastic ornament and the stiff little mesh veil add just the proper note of sophistication.

If you wish the simple directions for making this smart Du Barry turban send a 3-cent stamp to Frances Mangum, Post Fashion Editor.

Molyneux Offers Bolero Ensemble

One of the most striking and successful of Molyneux's creations is a bolero ensemble which he designed for the Baroness Eugene de Rothschild. It is made of a soft, lightweight black woolen. The dress has a round neck close to the throat, straight sleeves open at the wrists, both neckline and sleeves are bordered by white satin, and a white satin girdle sash ties around the waist.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

When Fever Is Healthful.

Whenever a new plan of treatment for any disease condition is suggested the popular reaction proceeds in opposite directions. Some will immediately accept the proposed management with fervor and claim for it cure-all properties, while others, constitutionally conservative, will decry it as unworthy and without value. All too frequently, however, remedies having to do with human ills are launched for public consumption before sufficient experimental data have been obtained to warrant the announcement. This has been the fate of fever therapy, which is now receiving considerable attention at the hands of able investigators.

Asthma, which we know has many causes (allargic and infectious), often presents a puzzling medical problem. Improvement in 25 intractable cases, that is, those that had not capitulated to any previously attempted form of thearapy, have been reported. In a group of six cases complete remission of symptoms was obtained in five by three sessions of fever of five hours each. In another series of 14 cases amelioration was marked in 6. In the balance the results were temporary.

In disease of the blood vessels of the extremities—conditions which bring on possible gangrene or other interference with circulation—the temperature was not raised above 102 degrees. It was found that the heat could not be so rapidly disseminated because of the already reduced circulation. Lessening of pain and an increase in the general nutrition of the tissues followed.

We must view this new agent as similar to the remedy which nature uses when fever develops in the presence of an infection. All of which probably means that certain chemical reactions are taking place in the body at high temperatures which may be antagonistic to the disease in question.

Tulle Hat Latest For Sports Wear

Tulle hats have an important place in Lilly Dache's spring and summer collection. One of these is a sports hat in brown with a tiny bird perched jauntily on the top of a square crown and wide brim.

Sports hat of tulle? Just that. Thirty layers of it stitched so closely it is as much a sports material as the roughest tweed. The edges are left rough to distinguish it from the more tailored fabrics which have finished edges. A grosgrain ribbon around this hat is in flame color. Doeskin gloves have been dyed to match.

Simplicity Key to Ex-Queen's Dress

The former Queen of Spain makes simplicity the keynote to her wardrobe. One of her newest evening gowns, from Rosineparis, a Paris house which makes many clothes for Latin royalty and near royalty, is almost devoid of trimming. Of white flamisol it is squared at the neck, and has a seam down the center front. At the back the bodice crosses in surplice style. Very low on the skirt, 3 or 4 inches from the floor, two or three little loose pleats give flare to the hem. The jacket is loose, hip length and a little full in the upper part of the sleeve. She wears sash of blue chiffon, and sometimes pins a bouquet of blue corn flowers at the neckline.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

Hired to impersonate June, beautiful young stepsister of Jim Bradley, Ruth Dayton finds herself in love with her make-believe brother. The impersonation was the idea of Joe and Clara Bradley, uncle and aunt of Jim. They had hired Ruth to go with them to Chicago to the bedside of Jim when he was thought to be dying after an auto accident. June, they said, was ill and could not go. Jim was blinded by the crash and would not know of the deceit.

Arrived in Chicago, however, a series of events leads Ruth to suspect that Joe and Clara are eager to bring about Jim's death. Held prisoner by them, she dares not confide in Jim, who is too ill, and cannot get word out for help.

CHAPTER XII.

Jim was in good humor that afternoon. He lay in his bed, propped up ever so slightly on the pillows, his long muscular frame appearing rested and at ease.

"You're better, aren't you, darling?" Ruth asked, glad of the little ruse that made it quite easy and natural for her to call him all the dear, intimate names she so wanted to call him.

"You don't mean it?" delightedly, "who told you?"

"Doctor. He said the cuts are all healing nicely; weren't very bad to begin with. The real trouble seems more deeply seated."

June—she thought of herself as June these days—hovered close to Jim. She smoothed back his curly mop of hair, almost black against the pillow. "Don't you worry, dear," she whispered. "It will all come right. You'll see again. You just wait. You'll find that I'm right."

Jim Is Happy.

"Dear little June," Jim's caress was not brotherly. It startled June—pleased her—sent again the thrill of joy flooding her very being. "You'll not leave me, June darling?"

"I'll not leave you, Jim. I'll never leave you."

"Never is a long time, June dear."

"But I'll not leave you."

"I'm glad, June," Jim said at last, "I'm glad."

Ruth held his hand. Her heart pounded so wildly that she wondered if Jim could hear it. Words couldn't come. She was too happy.

Jim was speaking, slowly, as though he thought through a maze of conflicting memories and ideas, going slowly, piecing out one step of the memory path at a time. "Remember how I used to wish you were really and truly my own sister."

"I remember," Ruth said, caught in the strange urge, almost believing that she did remember. Surely they had been close together always—just like this?

"I was just 10 when Dad married your mother. My own mother I never knew. Dad and I had been alone. I was glad Dad married again. I thought it would be nice to have a mother.

"It was nice, June. Your mother was a darling. She was like an own mother to me and she seemed a thousand times nicer when my Dad told me that she had a little daughter. You were 2 years old, June. Of course you don't remember. But I was old enough to remember.

Forgot Patient.

"You sat on my lap and you pulled my hair and laughed and called me 'Boy.' You were the sweetest, dearest little thing I'd ever seen in all my life and I loved you so much that it hurt. I remember that I cried when Dad explained that you weren't really and truly my own sister.

"I was disappointed. I had always wanted a brother or a sister. It broke my heart that you actually couldn't be my own sister."

June laughed. Patted Jim's hand. "Go on dear," she whispered. Instinct, perhaps, told her something was coming, something she wanted very much to hear.

"Now I'm glad," Jim said, the light of happiness illumining his face in spite of all the disfiguring bandages. "I'm glad, dear, that you aren't my sister."

Pascoe came hurrying into the room. "I got into a three-handed game of rummy with Mr. and Mrs. Bradley," he chuckled, almost as a member of the family might. "I forgot all about having a patient."

"You won't have a patient long."

Jim laughed. "I have such good nursing when Miss June comes that I've decided to get well."

"A good idea, Mr. Bradley," Pascoe said cheerfully. "Now, then, how about another nap?"

Jim grumbled at the suggestion. "I'm not a baby. You seem to think I need a nap every half hour."

"Just because you're better today isn't any sign that I'm letting you overexert yourself so that you'll be worse tomorrow. Rest now or no visitors this evening."

"I'll take the visitor this evening," Jim said, patting Ruth's hands. "O. K.?"

"O. K., Jim," Ruth said, bending close to him.

Jim's voice was very low so that no other person could hear, not even Pascoe who busied himself at the medicine table. "You'll come just as soon as you can—sweetheart?"

"I'll come just as soon as I can," Ruth promised, radiantly

But the path was not so smooth, the future not so radiant once away from Jim.

In the presence of the man she loved very dearly it was really easy to pretend. Easy to pretend that the real June Bradley sat at his bedside. Easy to pretend that she would be free to accept his love.

But Ruth Dayton was not free to accept it.

Jim Makes Love to Ruth.

Her position in this house had grown very much more complicated with the realization that she loved Jim Bradley and that he loved her.

There was little opportunity to think. Aunt Clara came to the door insisting upon a visit with Ruth. "I was in the next room, child, as you know," she confessed quite shamelessly. "I couldn't hear all Jim was saying to you, but I did hear enough to know that he was making love to you. Is that true, Ruth?"

"I don't exactly know," Ruth confessed.

"I heard him say that he was glad you really aren't his sister. It startled me at first. I thought maybe he'd caught on. You don't think he has, do you?"

No Recovery.

"No, I don't believe that he has." Aunt clara eyed the girl keenly. "Look here, Ruth, you aren't falling in love with that man, are you?"

"And if I am?"

There was no doubt about the sincerity of Aunt Clara's advice. "Take my advice. Don't. You'll only break your heart if you do. He's a desperately sick man."

"He's better."

"He thinks he's better. He really isn't improving very much. Just temporarily, Pascoe says it. So does Dr. McGuire.

"There are internal injuries. Doctor told Joe so this morning. The improvement doesn't mean anything. Jim may linger several days yet, perhaps even a week or two. There just isn't any chance of his permanent recovery."

Clara Bradley's words rang with an assurance, and a conviction that dismayed Ruth.

"Then if that's true, why aren't you calling other help? There are hundreds of physicians in Chicago. Why employ only one? It looks to me as if you didn't want him to get well. As if you deliberately hoped he would die."

Ruth would have been frightened had she looked closely to see the hatred smoldering in Clara Bradley's eyes.

"That's a pretty broad statement, Ruth," Mrs. Bradley said, controlling her anger with an effort. "Everything possible is being done for Mr. Bradley."

"That's what you say." Ruth was fearless in her anger. "Prove it. Prove that you aren't a crook. Prove that you aren't a murderess. Go to the telephone right now. Call the Cook County Medical Association. Tell them to send up the best physicians in Chicago for consultation. I dare you to do it."

Mrs. Bradley's voice was trembling with rage. "Be quiet, you fool," she hissed. "Do you want the whole house to hear?"

"I don't mind if the whole world hears. You've held me here a prisoner. I've known it all along. I've been a coward. But I'm through now. You can't keep me any longer. I'm leaving this minute. I—"

In a flash Clara Bradley was at her from the front. "You came not a minute too soon," she shrilled. "She was openly defying me."

Fight Personality Flaws

JUST ONE flaw in an otherwise delightful personality—but it may be serious enough to overshadow a whole life!

Self-consciousness with the opposite sex is that kind of flaw. Some women, you've noticed, are lively and natural until a man enters on the scene. Then they behave as though he were Public Enemy Number One.

Considering the young girl who finds herself fussed to death because she has to chat with a boy of her own age while they wait for a street car! And making the boy feel awkward himself, of course.

Now, wouldn't it be easy to ask the young chap which car to take, even though she may know all about the cars? Or she could say she heard he has made the basketball team. A little smooth flattery is never a mistake.

And then there's the older woman who feels a great gulf between her and the business man behind the desk. She can't make out a good case for herself in asking a business favor or applying for a job.

Of course, the more timid she seems, the stiffer and more embarrassed the man becomes. If she'd only sit up at ease on her chair, speak in a clear, friendly tone, listen with interest!

Whatever personality problem troubles you, find out how to build up your weak points, how to make your strong points your winning card. Our 40-page illustrated booklet will help you check up on yourself. Learn to have a friendly "way with you," a pleasant voice, an even temper, smoothness, and tact.

Expert Praises Baby's Growth Series in Post

Dr. Arnold Gesell's feature, "How a Baby Grows," now appearing in The Post, is discussed in the following article by Mrs. Myrtle Meyer Eldred, who, through her column, "Your Baby and Mine," has advised thousands of parents during the last 18 years.

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred.

WHEN a mother welcomes that pink-skinned, wriggling bundle of sweetness—her newborn baby—how little does she know of its potentialities? She does not know whether it will be blonde, brunette, or red-haired. She does not know whether it will be a brilliant mental genius or a pathetic, helpless idiot. None of these things can be determined the first few days of a child's life.

But the impersonality which characterizes the new-born child quickly vanishes. Within ten days the baby has begun to show its own individuality. It may be sweet and patient about waiting for its meals. It may be a red-faced, arm-lashing, foot-kicking picture of sheer rage.

By the time baby is 3 months old he has made a really noticeable development. He has learned the sound of his mother's voice, and her words can relax his soft mouth into a beguiling and devastating smile. If turned on his fat tummy, he can hold his head up for quite a long time. He can utter contentment when feeding time arrives, or indicate in no uncertain way when he has had his fill.

What does all this mean to the average mother? Is she resigned to letting the child develop as he will and merely enjoying the evidences of his development? Not the average mother.

Make Comparisons.

Everywhere, when mothers get together, comparisons are made. "Does Tommy show any interest in his toys yet?" And Tommy's mother admits proudly that when she pushes Tommy's squeaking rubber doll toward him, he always laughs out loud.

"But how old is Tommy?" the other mother wants to know, and is relieved to discover that Tommy is six weeks older than her own young hopeful.

There must be a more accurate measuring rod, though, than just these chance comparisons with babies of one's acquaintance. These babies may all be underfed. They may all lack the opportunities for development. Because of this, the mother may expect too little of her child and offer him no incentive to develop, or she may expect too much and thus worry herself and the child, or discipline him for behavior of which he is not yet capable.

In Dr. Arnold Gesell's normative summaries we have such a measuring rod. They offer a measure of normal development that is as accurate as 12 inches is 12 inches. It has been made so because, at the Yale University clinic of child development, he has watched and measured hundreds of babies over a period of many years. He has observed babies play and act as babies do when they do not know they are being watched. He has measured them to determine how fast they add inches, how quickly teeth appear, at what age they creep and stand and walk, how many words are in their vocabularies at different ages and how they treat other babies. In a word, these summaries take stock of physical, mental, social and language development of children up to school age.

Indorses Series.

Perhaps you saw the first series of newspaper pictures of Dr. Gesell's series, "How a Baby Grows," in The Sunday Post. These will continue for some weeks, and I hope you will watch for them. Dr. Gesell's findings have been used by scientists and parent educators for years. I quote him often in my baby column. His findings are part of the test material used at baby health contests.

But nothing is as illuminating to mothers as the pictures themselves, which show real babies acting in natural ways and offering mothers the opportunity to check and measuse their own babies' development.

What makes this material so valuable is that the most gigantic strides in development are made in those important first years. The rate of development depends always upon a child's mental equipment at birth—our old friend heredity—and equally upon the influence of his diet and his home training—environment. The baby's heredity is fixed at birth, but when mothers know what normal babies can do when healthy and given the opportunity to act, there is an incentive for patient training and careful feeding, which will bring her own baby into the classification called normal.

Raincoats of Lace Forecast by Stylist For Women Soon

Miss Miller, who is visiting in this country, says this rainwear is but one example of the way lace is entering new costume fields.

"Why, there was a time," she said, "when lace was used mainly for trimming and occasionally for very formal dresses. Now, look, even sports dresses are made of it." She referred to that sportsy, coarse lace that is cool to wear and washes so easily.

Decorated Ice Cubes Are Simple to Make

Mint leaves, watercress and candied fruit make very delightful decorating material for ice cubes. Simply put them on the ice cubes and add just enough water to freeze into place. Blocks of ice are sometimes desirable for bowls of punch and may be frozen instead of cubes by removing the grids from a tray. They may be plain, garnished, colored or decorated as wanted.

Fruit juices may be frozen as ice cubes or blocks for chilling punch rather than plain water, as the water will dilute the punch as it melts while the fruit juice will add to the flavor.

Frozen Cream Can Be Varied With Sauces

THESE sauces may be kept in your electric refrigerator and used when desired. Many variations for desserts are possible by adding different sauces to home-made or commercial frozen creams.

Orange Cream Sauce.

2 egg yolks
½ cup sugar
Juice and grated rind of 1 orange
1 cup whipping cream

Heat grated orange rind, juice and sugar. Strain. Cook again for approximately 2 minutes. Add well-beaten egg yolks. Cook for five minutes or until eggs are thickened, stirring constantly. Cool to room temperature. Chill in refrigerator. Fold in chilled whipped cream before serving. This is delicious when partly frozen and served on angel cake.

Butterscotch Sauce.

2 cups brown sugar
6 tablespoons butter
1½ cups hot water

Melt butter in saucepan and add brown sugar. Continue stirring until butter and sugar are well mixed. Add hot water and cook approximately ten minutes. Cool. Place in refrigerator to chill.

"Luminous" Hose Echo Of Trend for Season

Stylists believe that stockings should echo the season's trend to "sheen-and-shimmer" as exemplified by patent leathers, lacquered straws and velvety woolens. The result is the development of a luminous stocking called "Satinskin." It comes in the season's best selling shades ranging from the coppery tones through to the new lively tans.

Canned Milk.

Evaporated milk is produced by evaporating about 60 per cent of the water from whole milk. Sweetened condensed milk is produced by evaporating the same proportion of water and then adding pure cane sugar.

Peanut Brittle Mousse Is a Party Favorite

There is no question that this peanut brittle mousse in Charlotte Russe cups with candy flower decoration will make an impression on your guests. But because it is so easy to make and can be well out of the way early in the morning by merely tucking in the trays of your electric refrigerator is the reason that it appeals to the busy hostess.

Pleasant Homes

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IN THE VERY grand movie "A Tale of Two Cities," Blanche Yurka made a dramatic Mme. Defarge and stole the show, we thought, from the other players. But even more fascinating is Miss Yurka in her own home, being herself. Here she is a personality in her own right, with a poised and pointed wit, not a pretty woman, but deeply movingly beautiful. Her slender blondeness, the poignant modulations in her voice, the expressive turn of enormous gray eyes, of supple white hands, made a compelling silhouette against this background she has created for herself.

A portrait of Miss Yurka that hangs over the sofa in her living room suggested the colors she has used in the room . . . jade green, Chinese red and a dusty beige. And the sofa itself is a masterpiece. It is 9 feet long, a relic from her girlhood home, made up specially to order because Yurkas all come long, this one told us merrily. A Chinese brocade on the piano is beige with threads of gold and mulberry and reds woven through it, a gift of Dr. William Beebe. There are ever so many remembrances of the theater . . . a sketch of John Barrymore with a not-quite-nice but very Barrymore-esque inscription, a tintype that was a prop in the play "Carrie Nation," a beautiful edition of Hamlet and several caricatures of Miss Yurka. A huge man-size desk in her study was bought at the end of Miss Yurka's engagement with Sothern.

Frozen Desserts Offer Wide Range in Making

Peanut Brittle Mousse Recipe Is Attractive and Easily Followed; Post Food Editor Also Recommends Gelatin Formula.

FROZEN desserts are always popular and they are quickly and easily made at home when one has an electric refrigerator. The housewife when she makes frozen desserts can use her own ingenuity and imagination in combining intriguing flavors that are especially attractive to smooth textured mixtures.

The weeks that follow Easter are always gay with social events and the woman who entertains at home is always on the lookout for new and interesting refreshments. Peanut brittle mousse is a delicious sweet to add to your list of homemade electrically frozen desserts.

Made of rich sweet cream and peanut brittle, it is nourishing and tempting with its rich, nutty flavor. If you wish to add a complementary flavor to this frozen dessert serve it with crisp butter cookies.

Busy housekeepers enjoy making this mousse because it can be made early in the day and left in the electric refrigerator until ready to serve for luncheon or dinner. It eliminates a lot of last minute preparation.

Different Flavors.

And now about flavors. If you prefer another flavor to peanuts, try ground toffee or pistachios. Fresh, dried or canned fruits, crushed and sweetened, may be added, or you can make plain mousse and serve it with any of your favorite ice cream sauces.

If you prefer, you may freeze the peanut brittle mousse in little Charlotte Russe cups. These can be filled and then tucked into the freezing tray of your electric refrigerator. The mousse may be garnished or decorated before freezing or just before serving with flowers of dainty candies in pastel colors and stems and leaves or green gum drops.

It is convenient to put the peanut brittle through the food chopper before adding to the cream.

1½ cups whipping cream
½ cup peanut brittle, ground
Pinch salt
2 tablespoons corn sirup
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Beat cream until stiff. Fold in the finely ground peanut brittle and add sirup, vanilla and salt. Pour mixture into a refrigerator pan that has been lined with heavy paraffin paper or pack in china ramekins or Charlotte Russe cups for individual service.

Leave for 3 Hours.

Leave in the freezing compartment of the electric refrigerator without stirring for three hours or until the mixture is firm. One hour makes one pint of mixture very cold and practically frozen. After two hours it will have a soft, mushy consistency. In three to four hours it should be hard enough to hold its shape. Four hours will give it a more ripened flavor.

Naturally a larger amount of mixture takes a longer time to freeze. It is a good plan to prepare it after breakfast or right after lunch to serve for the evening dinner.

One attractive feature about using the Charlotte Russe cups is that the dessert doesn't have to be removed before serving. Serve the little cups on paper lace doilies on ice cream plates.

One cup of milk in which one teaspoon of gelatin is dissolved may be combined with the recipe given above to make half again as much as when cream alone is used.

Soak one teaspoon gelatin in one tablespoon of cold milk and dissolve by placing cup with gelatin mixture in boiling water. Add slowly ¼ cup milk, then add to ¾ cup milk. Add ½ cup sugar, or 1-3 cup sugar and 3 tablespoons light corn sirup, salt and two teaspoons vanilla. Pour into trays of electric refrigerator and place in chilling unit. When beginning to stiffen, beat until light. Beat ½ pint cream until stiff and gradually beat in the gelatin mixture. Freeze without stirring like directions given. Mousse may be kept for several days in the chilling unit if covered with heavy waxed paper.

Cookie Dough May Be Stored In Refrigerator

Can Be Baked as Needed; Interesting and Easily Mixed Recipes.

THIS is the time of year when you will appreciate your electric refrigerator more than ever for there are so many warm weather uses to which it can be applied. Take the subject of cookies, for example.

It isn't a tiring task in the winter to mix up a large batch of cookies that must be baked all at one standing, but when the weather is pleasant and warm, and the sunshine calls you out-of-doors, the situtation is entirely reversed.

Put your electric refrigerator to work then, and instead of mixing a batch of cookies that must be baked all at once, try mixing a regrigerator dough, that can be stored for days at a time in your electric box. These cookies can be cut off the roll in the quantity needed and baked a dozen or so at a time. Here are some interesting and easily mixed recipes.

Refrigerator Cookies.

1½ cups shortening
1 cup brown sugar
1-3 cup white sugar
3 eggs
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
4 cups flour

Cream shortening. Add sugar and beat well. Then add eggs, one at a time, beating meanwhile. Sift dry ingredients and stir into first mixture. It is nice to divide this dough into three portions, adding melted chocolate and vanilla to one; grated coconut to another; nuts and raisins or chopped dates to the third. These portions may be made into sausage like rolls, wrapped in waxed paper, and placed in the electric refrigerator overnight or until wanted.

Before baking, slice thin, approximately one-eigth inch, and bake on a cooky sheet in hot oven (40 degrees F.) from 5 to 8 minutes. Part of the chocolate dough may be rolled to one-fourth inch thickness (square), a portion of the light dough rolled similarly and placed on the chocolate dough. The two sheets should then be "scrolled" in jelly roll fashion, wrapped in wax paper, and left in the refrigerator a few hours before slicing. This will give a pinwheel effect.

This recipe makes three dozen cookies.

Butterscotch Cookies.

½ cup shortening
2 cups brown sugar
2 eggs
1-16 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 teaspoon soda
3 cups pastry flour or
2¾ cups bread flour

Cream the shortening with the sugar. Add the beaten eggs and vanilla. Sift the flour with the soda, cream of tartar and salt. Add to the first mixture. Form into rolls about 2 inches in diameter and wrap in waxed paper. Place in electric refrigerator until wanted. Slice and bake on greased baking sheet for 10 minutes at 375 degrees F., a moderate oven.

Refrigerator Rolls Ease Hot Bread Problem

If your husband demands hot rolls every evening with his dinner, don't disappoint him. Merely mix a good-sized batch of refrigerator dough and store it away in your electric refrigerator. Then just before dinner pinch off the amount needed for the family, shape into rolls and bake. You will like the following recipe:

Refrigerator Rolls.

1 cake compressed yeast
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups lukewarm water
1 egg
7 cups flour
3 tablespoons shortening

Crumble yeast into large mixing bowl. Add sugar, salt and water. Add well-beaten egg. Sift flour once before measuring. Add half flour and beat well. Add melted shortening and mix in remainder of flour. Let rise to double its bulk. Punch down, cover tightly and place in electric refrigerator. About one hour before baking, remove desired amount of dough. Shape into small rolls and place on greased pan. Use gem pans for cloverleaf rolls. Let rise slowly to double their bulk, then bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) for 20 to 25 minutes.

This dough can be kept in an electric refrigerator and used as desired. Shapes may be prepared in the morning and placed back in the refrigerator to be ready for quick baking. Allow just enough time for the dough to rise and the rolls to bake so that they will come from the oven piping hot.

Sweet Potato Available at All Times

Has Become Almost as Popular as Irish Variety as Food Article.

Dish Formerly Could Be Had Only in Winter; Serving Varied.

By Dorothea Duncan.

POTATOES HAVE stolen a march on all other vegetables as far as the American palate is concerned, for no matter how often they appear on the menu they are still a favorite vegetable. The manner in which they are served must be varied, of course. But then potatoes are such a versatile vegetable that there are almost as many ways of preparing them as there are days in the year.

Sweet potatoes have become almost as popular as white potatoes, and there are any number of persons who would give them preference over the latter, especially the Southerner, as sweet potatoes are one of the chief vegetable foods in the Southern States.

Some years ago sweet potatoes were definitely a winter vegetable and were associated with the Christmas or Thanksgiving dinner, but now they are available throughout the country during every month of the year. This means that the sweet potato is no longer considered merely as an accompaniment for the turkey, but it has become a popular dish in its own right. It is often served as the main dish for a luncheon, and no wonder, for it has real palate appeal, it gives energy to the body and satisfaction to the appetite, and it can be attractively combined with many of the lighter foods, especially crisp vegetables and succulent fruits.

Not a New Dish.

The sweet potato croquette is not a new dish, but the flavoring of the sweet potato mixture with wine before it is shaped into little balls and fried is a new version that gives the palate a new thrill. A single marshmallow toasted to a golden brown perched on top of each croquette also adds savor to this already popular dish.

Doesn't this new version of the sweet potato croquette give you an idea for a perfect spring luncheon menu? Imagine a swirling heap of crisp, broiled bacon in the center of a platter surrounded by marshmallow-topped, wine-flavored, sweet potato croquettes and sprigs of parsley here and there. Then a green vegetable, asparagus, fresh peas or string beans to add just the right balance, and a fresh fruit salad or a heaping dish of strawberries and cream for dessert

Sweet Potato Croquettes With Wine.

6 medium sweet potatoes
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons domestic sherry wine
Salt and pepper to taste
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup dry bread crumbs
6 marshmallows
Fat for deep frying

Pare and cook potatoes until tender, mash or rice and add wine, butter, salt and pepper. When mixture is slightly cool shape into croquettes, roll in crumbs, dip in beaten egg then roll again in crumbs. Fry in deep, hot fat until a golden brown. The proper temperature for frying sweet potato croquettes is 390 degrees F. Just before serving, top each with a small marshmallow and place under a broiler flame to brown slightly.

Post Offers Prizes For Cottage Cheese

Cottage cheese—that favorite old-fashioned protein food—always jumps into the limelight as a perfect dish for spring menus. For this reason it has been chosen as the subject of The Post's new recipe contest this week.

Readers of the food page are asked to submit their favorite cottage cheese recipe to Dorothea Duncan this week. The five best will be awarded cash prizes—$5 will be given the sender of the best recipe, $3 will go to the sender of the second best and the three women who submit the next best recipes will each receive $1.

In choosing a cottage cheese recipe to submit, remember that cottage cheese is delicious either cooked or uncooked. This contest should bring to light some of the old-fashioned dishes—cottage cheese pie, pudding, etc., as well as some of the newer versions—salads, frozen desserts and so forth.

Merely write out your favorite cottage cheese recipe and send it to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to mail your recipe in time to reach this office by Saturday morning.

Muffin Hints.

Peaks and tunnels in muffins often come from overbeating the batter. The dry and liquid ingredients should be blended together only until all dry ingredients are dampened. The mixture should not be beaten or stirred.

Household Hints

For Electric Refrigerators.

When more ice cubes are needed than can be frozen at one time, those which have been made may be stored in the special glass tray beneath the freezing trays while another lot is being frozen.

Ice cubes made of clear water, have a number of uses. They are always convenient for cooling beverages. They can be put into dishes of celery, olives, radishes, and the like, either whole or crushed. They can be utilized as "nests" for cocktails, grapefruit, melons or oysters.

In addition to their many food and beverages uses, ice cubes wrapped in a fine cloth are benficial for treating and massaging the face. They also can be used for cold packs to relieve feverish conditions.

Packaged ice cream long before you intend to serve it, can be kept firm in the freezing compartment of your electric refrigerator. Packaged ice cream particularly can often be placed right in the trays in many models by removing one of the ice tray shelves or the ice cream may be transferred to one of the freezing trays. In holding ice cream it is usually best to set the cold control at a colder position.

Ideas for Serving Refrigerator Cream

Date Bars.

Sift ½ cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder and ⅛ teaspoon salt. Mix with 2 cups sliced dates and 1 cup chopped nuts. Beat 2 eggs, add ½ cup sugar and beat well together. Combine egg and flour mixtures. Pour into well-greased pan, spreading batter about 1 inch thick. Bake in a slow oven (325 degrees F.) 45 to 60 minutes. Remove from pan and cut into bars. Roll in powdered sugar.

Chilling Pastry.

The cold temperature maintained in the electric food compartment is ideal for the proper chilling of pastry dough before baking. This improves the tenderness and flakiness of the pastry. In many instances dough can not be successfully prepared unless it is thoroughly chilled. Hot water pie crust, too, is better after proper chilling.

Sanico Broilers

are scientifically raised on modern poultry farms—

After the young chicks leave the brooder they are graded for health and are transferred into long, heated poultry houses. Here they are fed a scientifically balanced ration that eventually produces the tender, fine-flavored meat for which Sanico Broilers are famous. During winter the houses are properly heated and drafts are carefully avoided to eliminate any sickness or disease.

Sanico Broilers are raised on the Eastern Shores of Delaware, Maryland and in the Valley of Virginia. In no other section of the country has the industry become more efficient or successful in producing health and quality.

Auto Builders Quit Chamber In Bus Dispute

Manufacturers Are Said to Oppose Federal Law 'Urged by Rails.'

By the Associated Press.

The Automobile Manufacturers Association, trade organization of the giant motor industry, has resigned from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Informed business circles said the motor manufacturers were not satisfied with the chamber's support of Federal bus and truck legislation.

The chamber, the largest business association in the Nation, is now negotiating with the automobile manufacturers in an attempt to close the breach. Meanwhile, several individual manufacturers maintain their membership in the chamber.

At the chamber's convention a year ago a resolution was adopted calling "for establishment of Federal regulation of all forms of interstate transportation without further delay."

The automobile group was said to feel this resolution was dictated by railroad interests, and assertions were made that the committee which put forth the declaration was "packed" by railroaders.

Greater Benefit.

New York, April 14 (AP).—Withdrawal of the Automobile Manufacturers Association from membership in the Chamber of Commerce of the United States was merely a matter of obtaining greater benefit from another group, Alfred G. Reeves, vice president and general manager of A. M. A., said today.

"We have been a member of the chamber," he commented, "since its organization, I believe. The directors of A. M. A. merely thought that the National Association of Manufacturers was more truly representative of the automobile industry, and decided to cast our lot with that group.

"The United States Chamber of Commerce has six divisions, only one of which is devoted to manufacturing. The entire membership of the National Association of Manufacturers is composed of manufacturers. It was the feeling of the directors that our interests lay in that direction."

Student Stricken In Poisoning Plot

Leesburg, Fla., April 14 (AP).—A high school boy suffered serious internal burns today in what apparently was an attempt at a wholesale poisoning.

Noma Cason, freshman, was sent to a hospital after swallowing one bite of a sandwich which authorities said appeared to have been "doctored" with a deadly corrosive poison. His condition was serious but not dangerous.

A second student narrowly escaped poisoning when he noticed that his lunch had been tampered with. Smiley Allen, bus driver and a senior at school, avoided the same type of poison when he noticed a strange odor in a bottle of milk he was about to drink.

Authorities said it was the third attempt to poison young Cason. They were at a loss to explain the motive.

Lunches of the students had been brought from different homes, leading authorities to the theory that they had been tampered with in the school itself.

Governor Frees Driver Of Car Killing Sister

Austin, Tex., April 14 (AP).—Gov. Allred today granted clemency to J. R. Johnson, driver of a truck which killed the Governor's sister, Mrs. W. B. Stokes, jr. Johnson pleaded guilty of negligent homicide March 21 and was sentenced to 60 days in jail and fined $500. The Governor remitted the jail term, fine and all costs.

Johnson admitted he "nodded" while driving. The Governor's proclamation said real responsibility rested with "the system whereby he was compelled to work for such long hours for such miserably low pay." Johnson said he was paid by the trip and made as many runs as possible.

Senators Due To Raise City Funds Today

Budget Bureau Favors 5-Point Program on Traffic Ills.

The Senate sub-committee on District appropriations today probably will raise estimates of the 1937 District supply bill to equal or exceed Budget Bureau figures.

The District Commissioners denied that responsibility for slashes in estimates by the Budget Bureau was theirs.

The Budget Bureau approved a five-point legislative program designed by the Commissioners to provide a cure for the city's traffic ills.

These were District budget developments yesterday.

Marking up of the District bill is expected to take little time, in view of the sub-committee's decision to restore all items to budget figures, save those that they may increase slightly.

Project Approval Due.

The three major projects added by the House are expected to be restored and to be financed out of the $3,000,000 surplus carried in the original budget.

The projects are $1,000,000 to start construction of a municipal courts building in Judiciary Square, $353,000 for Eastern High School addition, and $250,00 to start building a new Chain Bridge.

Senator Thomas, the chairman, yesterday wrote to Representative Thomas L. Blanton, acting chairman of the House sub-committee, and explained that it could not grant him a hearing, as requested. While the latter was not made public, it is understood that Blanton was told there was nothing personal in the refusal, but that it was a matter of policy not to hear any members on the general topic of appropriations.

Urges Vigorous Stand.

Senator Thomas stated he will urge the iDstrict Commissioners in the future to press their demands before the Budget Bureau with more vigor thna in the past. His determination was disclosed after he heard Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director, explain to he subcommittee that he had given the District everything that the Commissioners aske d aggressively.

The chairman is convinced that larger estimates for public health and hospitals would have been approved by the budget director had the District heads presented a stronger case.

The Commissioners took an opposite view. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said:

"The Commissioners submitted their estimates to the Budget Bureau as the minimum requirements of the city and they made every effort to get the Budget Bureau to approve the apporpriations.

Made Statement.

"I made my statement before the Budget Bureau on those items. Later I accompanied the committee of the medical society before the bureau after we heard the estimates might be cut. I considered that a full and formal request made by the Commissioners.

"I made my statement. I said the Commissioners believed these items should be retsored and approved in full. If that's timidity, I don't know what timidity is.

"We are not informed of what cuts the budget bureau makes in our estimates and we are not allowed to tell what happens before the Budget Bureau at our hearings and we are not allowed to go beyond the bureau estimates when we go before Congress."

Urged Change.

The present Commissioners have repeatedly urged publicly that they be permitted to submit the estimates directly to Congress without the intervention of the Budget Bureau.

Senator Thomas promised immediate action on the traffic program. Previously, he had told the Commissioners to include in heir proposals any measures or requests for additional authority which mignt aid in solving the local problem.

The proposals provide: Creation of a Congressional committee to consider a stagger-hour schedule of Government working hours; licensed control of all parking lots; A fee system, payable to the District, for parking on public streets; a regulation requiring property owners to remove snow from in front of their premises, and a drastic limitation in the number of licensed taxicabs.

Ear Muffs

Glass Wonders if Others Need Noise Abaters.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, who last week scornfully rejected the gift of ten pink cotton "anti-noise" ear stoppers, yesterday thanked the donor, Health Officer George H. Ruhland, for providing "a remedy of purely personal and restricted nature."

Dr. Ruhland had sent the stoppers to the Virginia Senator when the latter complained about the city's din.

In thanking the health officer, Glass said that he wonders "what will become of the other 500,000 people here?"

When he sent the stoppers, Dr. Ruhland wrote the senator: "May I, as one who is much interested in noise abatement, submit something which I have personally found rather satisfactory in dealing with this problem."

Mother Uses $36 Relief Check To Buy Easter Finery, Evicted

Only Few of Dispossession Cases Involve Persons Receiving Aid; Tailor, Ordered Ousted, Disappears, So Police Take Charge of Clothes.

Not all the eviction cases that come to the office of the United States marshal at Fifth and E streets northwest are ones that make the deputies wish they carried extra dollar bills in their pockets.

For the deputy marshals in charge of evictions have been known to provide for a family where perhaps an ill wife and two or three children have had their household goods set out on the pavement around them.

But take Mrs. Ada Powell and her young brood, who lived in the first block of Pierce street. There were five little children in the household, three of them, Mrs. Powell's and two, her eldest daughters. Along came a $36 relief order near the end of last week, and the lure of Easter finery was too much for her feminine heart.

"I should have paid the rent, I know," she told the deputy who dispossessed her," but I wanted some new Easter clothes for the kids."

Friends in the neighborhood cared for Mrs. Powell and her children. Chief Deputy Marshal Thomas E. Ott, through whose efforts about 75 per cent of the families facing evictions are saved by application to the city's social agencies, said "many times those we have had to put out of their homes are immediately cared for by friends or neighbros."

Only a few of the eviction cases of the last month have been of persons on relief. The majority have been persons who refused to pay rent on homes or on business shops.

For instance, there was Tailor J. H. Sheridan, of 59 H street northwest. Page the Washington police if you have lost your suit at his shop. The landlord had to put Sheridan out, but when the deputy arrived with his movers to do the job, all he found was the tailor shop filled with other people's clothes. A hurried consultation was held and the police called to take charge of the clothes. So while the furniture was being moved to the sidewalk, the police loaded about 50 men's suits into cars and took them to headquarters for safe keeping.

On Monday, the deputies went to a residence at 413 Twenty-sixth street northwest, to dispossess a family. They found the family had moved out and a group of "squatters," accompanied by a 10-gallon still, had moved in. The squatters were disbursed and the still moved out.

Market Owner Shot in Scuffle With a Robber

Gunman Flees After Fight; Citizen of Southeast Clubbed, Stripped.

Irving Kagod, proprietor of a market at 2601 Sherman avenue northwest, was shot through the groin last night as he tussled with a Negro gunman who attempted to rob him in his store.

Kagod, who was treated at Garfield Hospital, said that the Negro entered and asked for a package of cigarettes. As he turned to give the man the cigarettes he found himself facing a pistol. He grappled with the man, who fled after firing the shot.

Daniel Shea, 50, of 602 E street southeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital for injuries of the skull, sustained when he was clubbed by a Negro, who took his clothes. The attack occurred near the Benning viaduct.

Loss of two rings valued at $600 was reported by Lillian Wolfe, of 4810 Georgia avenue northwest. The jewelry was stolen from her home, she told police.

Union Activities To Cost U. S. Job

Robert Durand, nephew of E. Dana Durand, chief economist of the U. S. Tariff Commission, will lose his Government job today because of union activities, he said last night.

One of the oldest employes in point of service of the rate survey of the Federal Power Commission, Durand said he was dismissed, effective today, following disputes with his superiors over his efforts to organize a chapter of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians.

The commission, following complaints by Durand, has agreed to investigate his dismissal. At a mass meeting of the union Monday night a resolution was adopted asking the commission to grant Durand and the union opportunity to review the findings of the investigation before final action is taken.

Kiwanis Committee Maps Convention Plans

The general convention committee of the Washington Kiwanis Club met last night at the Mayflower Hotel to draft preliminary plans for the twentieth annual convention of Kiwanis International, to be held here June 21-25.

It was the first meeting of the local group on arrangements. Lewis T. Breuninger, general chairman, presided. Nearly 7,500 delegates, their families and friends—are expected to attend.

53 Persons Arrested in Drive On Ball Game Parking Racket

As Washington battled the New York Yankees at Griffith Stadium yesterday, the hack inspector's office won a fight to stamp out the parking racket, ushered in each season with the opening game.

Five men assigned to the hack inspector's office seized 53 persons, mostly colored, who were soliciting parking in the ball park area.

Described as a "vicious racket" by police, it has reaped several thousand dollars each day an athletic event is held in the stadium.

Police explained that the parkers stationed themselves near an unoccupied parking spot and offered to watch the car for whoever parked there. If the driver paid no attention to the "watcher," he returned to find his automobile scratched, his tires deflated or the gas tank empty.

Near Tenth and U streets, several colored youths had tacked signs to trees offering the curb space for 25 cents.

Those arrested ranged from 12 to 50 years of age, and were clothed in all conceivable forms of dress. All persons over 17 were compelled to deposit $5 collateral for appearance in court, while those under 17 were released in custody of their parents for appearance in Juvenile Court.

So quickly had the hack inspector's office worked that few had the necessary $5 for release. Ordinarily, police said, the youths made from $5 to $50 at each big event.

In the Second Precinct Station, where those arrested were booked for soliciting parking, pandemonium reigned. Forty persons of all ages were brought in at one time. The older men joked with the station clerks, the young boys stared with big eyes at the cell block, fearful they would be placed there for the night.

When order was restored at about 5 p. m., the cell block was crowded and three colored juveniles sat in the "waiting room" for their mothers to claim them.

So thorough was the first day's work that police believe it will be unnecessary to station men near the ball park today. However, police announced they will continue to watch conditions.

The arrests were made by H. P. Miller, H. F. Skinner, W. H. Hinsons, L. A. Howard and F. L. Oswald, privates attached to the hack inspector's office.

Flying Flivver Arrives Here For Inspection

Two-Passenger Plane Can Attain Speed of 110 M. P. H.

A two-passenger "flying flivver" arrived at Washington Hoover Airport yesterday for inspection by officials of the Bureau of Air Commerce.

On hand to greet Geisse and to look over the radically different ship, was Eugene Vidal, director of the bureau. The little "family man's airplane" made several flights up and down the river with reporters and photographers who never had flown before serving in the capacity of co-pilots.

The plane is called the "Hammond Y." It was built in Michigan under the sponsorship of the Bureau of Air Commerce. Fifteen of the ships will be purchased by the Government for the use of inspectors in the field.

The "flivver" can fly 110 miles an hour although it operates more efficiently at 90. It has a range of 300 miles. Costing about $3,000 to build, the engineers in charge hope to place it on the private market after the Government's order is filled.

Reactionary!

Georgetown Residents Just Don't Want New Streets.

Georgetown residents not only like their old houses but also the old street paving of their section, a group told the Commissioners yesterday. The Commissioners recently ordered P street repaved from Wisconsin avenue to Twenty-eighth street. The old Belgian block paving now on the street should be left there, the group said.

Repair of the street should be delayed at least until after completion of the park driveway along the Virginia shore of the Potomac, and the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway drive, they said. They believe these two new roadways will divert much traffic from the P street neighborhood.

Former District Commissioner Sidney F. Taliaferro was among those who urged the delay on the Commissioners. Others included Mrs. F. H. Simonds, Constantine E. McGuire and Edward Clifford. They presented a petition signed by John Ihlder, executive of the Alley Dwelling Authority, and one of the early enthusiasts of the "back to Georgetown" movement.

Gallinger Job Quotas Filled, Bocock Says

Hospital Heads' Reply to Thomas Cites $200 Pay Roll Deficit.

Says the Senator Visited Wards on Unusually Light Day.

By Gerald G. Gross.

With a denial in one case and an explanation in the other, Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock of Gallinger Hospital yesterday replied to statements by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, on space and personnel conditions in the municipal institution.

Dr. Bocock denied charges, attributed to the budget bureau by Senator Thomas, that a large number of hospital positions have not been filled, although funds for them were appropriated.

"Every job for which funds were allotted during the present fiscal year has been filled," he declared. "In fact, we are facing a $200 payroll deficiency which will have to be met between now and June 30."

Lighter Than Usual.

Gallinger Hospital yesterday had 446 employes, he said. Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director, told the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations Monday, according to Chairman Thomas, that funds had been allotted for 476 workers and that only 401 had been hired.

Commenting upon Senator Thomas' statement that one-fifth of the hospital's beds were empty when he made a surprise inspection Easter Sunday, Dr. Bocock said:

"It is true that the Sunday census, 858, was much lighter than usual. The average daily number of patients was 915 for January, 928 for February and 893 for March. During the past winter, when the prevalence of respiratory diseases put a heavy burden on the hospital, there was hardly a day when all beds were not filed."

The normal capacity is 750 beds.

The medical and surgical wards, which are supposed to accommodate 16 persons per room, contain 24 to 28 beds. Seeing some of these extra beds empty, it was natural for Senator Thomas to gain the impression overcrowding does not exist, Dr. Bocock asserted.

Two weeks ago, he continued, the male medical ward had 102 patients; male surgical, 100; female surgical, 92, and female medical, 96. The normal capacity in each instance is 80. When Senator Thomas visited the hospital incognito Sunday, said Dr. Bocock, the respective number of ward patients had dropped to 82, 73, 67 and 73.

To Shun Controversy.

The superintendent explained he wished to enter no controversy with the Oklahoma Senator, who has been sympathetic to District officials, and citizens' requests for adequate public health and appropriations, but only desired to clarify both the personnel and housing issues. Accordingly, he wrote Thomas a letter yesterday setting forth the facts, he told the press.

Commissioner George E. Allen defended estimates for more money for Gallinger Hospital. He had visited it many times and always found it overcrowded, he said. He accepted figures submitted by Dr. Bocock, superintendent, as accurate, he said.

Elwood Street, director of public welfare, said that Senator Thomas might well have been deceived by appearances during his visit. Assuming Senator Thomas had found 20 per cent vacancy in some wards, that did not indicate the hospital was not operating as it should.

The hospital is divided to care for different kinds of patients in different wards and buildings, Street pointed out. Because there are vacant beds in one ward does not prove the hospital is overcrowded when other wards may be unable to accommodate all those who seek care.

A Scout of France at Arlington

Honor Boy Scout of France Pays Unknown Soldier Tribute

Visitor Places Wreath on Tomb at Arlington; Says Youth of Native Land Opposes War; Father Trained U. S. Troops.

Wearing upon his blue uniform the fleur de lis of France, Bernard Maine de Boissiere, the pick of 75,000 French Boy Scouts, stepped briskly in the bright sunshine at Arlington National Cemetery yesterday afternoon and placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

He brought his arm to a smart salute as a bugler sounded "Taps," and his dark eyes swept across the green slopes to the Potomac.

There was especial significance in the visit of De Boissiere to the marble amphitheater.

During the World War, before the 15-year-old was born, his father, Lieut. Albert de Boissiere, trained American troops for combat. Yesterday the youth remarked that he felt the soldier he honored was one of his father's pupils in the grim art.

"One never knows, of course," observed De Boissiere.

"There were thousands of young men in khaki then from America. My father and the other officers taught them how to throw the grenades and use the bayonets. Perhaps I, another generation, am paying tribute to some soldier my father knew."

Want World Peace.

The Boy Scouts of France want world peace, De Boissiere said.

They want peace with those youngsters of their own age who would be Boy Scouts in Germany—the Hitler Youth across the Rhine. They want peace with the boys of scouting age the world over.

"We are pacifists, we French Boy Scouts," said de Boissiere slowly.

In his native Paris, de Boissiere remembered yesterday, the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier is beneath the Arc de Triomph, and at its head a flame burns permanently. Armed sentries in trench helmets pace back and forth with fixed bayonets.

Leaves for New York Today.

"It looks down over the hillside to the river and is very big, like the expanses in your United States."

De Boissiere, who will leave Washington today for New York, from where he will sail home within a few days, won his trip for all-around scouting merit in his group. France has three bodies of Boy Scouts—Catholic, Protestant and Atheist. De Boissiere represents the Catholic group.

Eastern Star to Meet.

Areme Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, will observe "Masonic and Congressional Night" at 8:45 tonight in the Masonic Temple, Thirteenth street and New York avenue northwest. Members of both Houses of Congress will be guest speakers.

Commissioners Will Consider Zoning Change

Ban on Apartment Houses Near American U. Is Proposed.

Closing of the territory between American University and the Dalecarlia reservoir to apartment houses is proposed in two of four zoning changes which will be considered at a public hearing by the zoning commission at 10 a. m. next Tuesday.

One of the amendments to the zoning would change from residential, 40-foot and 60-foot A area to residential, 40-foot, A restricted area, all of the property now zone A area within the area bounded on the east by University avenue, on the south by Woodway lane, Forty-ninth street and Quebec street, on the west by Fordham road and on the north by Massachusetts avenue.

The other would change from residential, 40 and 60 foot A, to residential, 40, A restricted, all property zoned residential A within the area bounded on the north by Massachusetts avenue, on the west by the District Line and the Dalecarlia reservoir grounds and on the south by the restricted area lying north of Rockwood parkway between Dalecarlia reservoir grounds and University avenue and on the east by University.

Two other proposed changes will be considered. One would extend the first commercial, 60-foot, C, zoning of the lot at 2324 Wisconsin avenue. The other would change from residential, 40, A restricted, to residential, 40, A, the two squares bounded by Thirty-ninth, V, Forty-second and Arizona avenue at W street northwest.

Elimination of consent provisions in the zoning regulations will be considered at another public hearing the day following.

Mrs. Norton Is 'Shocked' By Hospitals

D. C. Rating Is as Low as Any in Nation, Says Committee Head.

Lack of Representation in Congress Blamed in Address.

Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House District Committee said last night she was "shocked" at conditions she found in Washington's hospitals, which she described as rating "as low as any I have seen in the country."

"With such beautiful buildings and parks," she told 150 guests at the sixteenth annual banquet of the Society of Natives at the Mayflower Hotel, "it seems impossible that a city could have such hospitals and even portable schools."

Mrs. Norton laid the blame for these conditions on the fact that the voteless citizens of the District had no representation in Congress.

She explained that work on the District committees of the House and Senate could not be of more than secondary importance to their members, their main task being to look out for the interests of their own constituents.

She urged a solid organization to get behind a movement to bring out of committee a bill to give the District the vote.

"If I were a native Washingtonian," the city's "unofficial mayor" concluded, "I would hate to think that I was not a citizen of the United States in the fullest sense of the word."

Mrs. Norton was followed by John Saul, president of the Washington Board of Trade, who was introduced by Fred A. Emery, the society's president, as "the most modest man in the United States."

He reviewed the cultural, religious and social progress of the Nation's Capital and concluded that it was "destined to continue to grow in world importance."

Virginia Society Will Give Dinner

The Society of Virginia will give an historical dinner at the Willard Hotel tonight in commemoration of the ceding of the Northwest Territory to the Union.

In 1784 Virginia gave the Union that part of her territory out of which were later carved the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Representatives of these States will be the speakers of the evening. They are Senators Robert J. Bulkley, of Ohio; William Dieterich, of Illinois, and Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, and Representatives Sherman Minton, of Indiana; William H. Blackney, of Michigan, and Harry Santhoff, of Wisconsin.

Former Gov. John G. Pollard of Virginia, president of the society, will preside. A dance will follow the dinner.

Press Agentry Takes on Color Of Old-Timers

By the United Press.

Hollywood, April 14.—Movie publicists, normally wild as Siwashes on pay day, are astonishing even the blase natives with a series of superoutlandish stunts.

During the past ten days, trumpeting style has reverted to the good old days of 20 years ago when "the blindest bluffs held good," and "the wildest tales were true," or at least true to Hollywood.

The most puzzling case—and veteran observers still aren't sure whether it was planned or accidental—was the temporary disappearance of Freddie Bartholomew's mother in New York, while en route to Hollywood to claim her famous little boy, living there with his aunt, Mary Myllicent Bartholomew.

Pigeon vs. Plane.

David Selznick's merry men, at the same time, were establishing a triumph of nature over man-made machines by arranging a "Boston decision" in favor of a pigeon in a race with an air-mail plane from Los Angeles to San Diego.

The trip takes less than an hour by plane. Pigeons were released an hour and a half before the ship took off. Even so, the plane arrived five minutes before the birds landed. For a while it looked bad for the favorites.

Publicity minded "referees" huddled, however, and after some argument emerged with the conclusion that the plane should be "handicapped" another 20 minutes.

The redoubtable Steven Hannagan, Hirohito of Hokum, imported to add a final fillip to ballyhoo tor Mr. John Hay Whitney's (Pioneer's) tinted "Dancing Pirate," could do no better than overplay the ancient genealogical wheeze.

Asked for Descendants.

He called for lineal descendants of famous pirates to take part in the picture, and so many responded the scheme was a complete bust. It appeared that Southern California was populated almost entirely by the posterity of Pirate Henry Morgan of the Spanish main.

Delectable Marsha Hunt is up in arms because Hollywood continues to recognize Ginger Rogers as feminine film colony ping-pong champ. "I beat Ginger 21-12, but no one pays any attention," wails Miss Hunt, much in the manner of Man Mountain Dean protesting the world's (in California) wrestling championship of Vincent Lopez.

Leo Carillo is set to be another Mexican bad hombre, this time in "The Gay Desperado" (Pickford-Lasky), with Singer Nino Martini his victim.

Arts Club

The Dramatic Committee of the Arts Club of Washington presents three one-act plays, At the Arts Club April 14, 15 and 16. Reviewed Tuesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE PROGRAM.

"THE REHEARSAL," comedy by Maurice Baring, directed by Pauline Stanley, with costumes designed by Mrs. Charles Bittenger.

The Arts Club and its dramatic unit stepped out of its customary beaux-arts character, presenting three one-act comedies last evening before a large and appreciative audience, with "Good Medicine" not only topping the bill but hitting a degree of spontaneity and speed seldom encountered.

In this work of Jack Arnold and Edsin Burke, Paul Murphy scored a decided hit. While he did not, perhaps, reveal the full range of his histrionic talents, he did show the finest and fastest reading of comedy lines of recent seasons.

Opposite him is Virginia True, as the wife, in a well-played part which is distinctly subordinate to that of Mr. Murphy. Edna Ellis Hilton, who also directed the comedy, was the millionairess and the piece's Lady Bountiful, in the end.

Showing that actors have not especially changed since Shakespeare's time, and that temperament is, as it was then, part and parcel of a star's artistic impedimenta, "The Rehearsal" revealed what might possibly have happened during the practice period of "Macbeth." Maurice Jarvis, as an actor of the "Great-I-Am" school, quite dominated the performance, which utilized snatches of several scenes of the tragedy for purposes of lampooning the foibles of thespians. Others of note in the cast were Harry Westcott, and Ed. E. Muth, as the harassed producer and stage manager; A. L. (Dixie) Diket, as the meek yet mildly disgusted Shakespeare, and Ben Smart, as Lady Macbeth. Allen Peck, jr., Hollis Schreuber and J. Martin Scranage completed the company, which was directed by Pauline Stanley.

"The Wedding Present," with which the program was opened, revealed Nathan A. Clark and Dorothy Winchcole (who also directed) endeavoring to solve the mystery of the missing wedding-gift list, or who gave which. The little comedy has its moments, but the trio of players failed to imbue it with any measure of life and spirit.

Montreal, April 14 (AP). — The Dionne quintuplets are becoming the dancing Dionne sister. "But they can keep time and appear to be promising dancers."

About The Showshops

"RHODES, THE EMPIRE BUILDER." Although this Gaumont British production of a story dealing with an epochal chapter in the development of the British Empire was made under the supervision of Bryan Foy, who was responsible for the first talking picture ever made, it seems to lack many of the essential qualities of greatness. At least, it falls short of the possibilities of the vast theme with which it deals.

BELL.

Inaugurating its action with the discovery of diamonds in the Kimberly district of South Africa, with one Cecil John Rhodes, an ordinary claim-staker, like thousands of others who invaded the territory in a rush comparable to the land stampedes in our own West when the Government threw open new country to the homesteaders, the narrative then leads by progressive steps, which are none too closely articulated, to Rhodes' complete dominance of the huge domain extending from Matabeleland to the Cape.

The steady development of resources beyond the mere mining of precious gems, the clashes with the native tribesmen and, more important than all, Rhodes' encounters with Paul Kruger, president of the Boer Republic, all are made a part of the story, but not such powerful parts as their importance demands. "Rhodes" does not move with the inevitability and crushing power that characterized the events upon which it is based.

Perhaps this unfortunate deflection of dominance on the screen was due in part to the fact that, especially during the closing sequences of the picture, Walter Huston, in the title role, bore so much more striking a resemblance to Ramsay MacDonald, former Prime Minister of England, than he did to Rhodes. It was a little confusing as to just what period in British history was being depicted.

"MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN." Precisely as has been so widely and so enthusiastically proclaimed since the release of this subject for national exhibition, this new Frank Capra production for Columbia keeps his record of sure-fire hits intact.

Based on a story by Clarence Budington Kelland, "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" is one of those closely knit, swiftly developed and expertly played comedy-dramas that create an audience response beyond their intrinsic merits. As was the case with the same director's "It Happened One Night," it is not so much the story in the present instance as the manner in which it is told in terms of spirited camera action and an economy of speeches. After the action gets into the courtroom, to be sure, there is a bit of loquacity now and again, but no more than the circumstances of a shyster lawyer's attempt to get away with figurative murder demands.

The story is that of the "country jake" tuba player, dreamer and sentimentalist who inherits a fortune of $20,000,000, is virtually shanghaied to New York and there encounters the usual roster of Broadway wolves hungrily waiting to devour him, tuba and all. Chief among his harassments is the young newspaperwoman who writes a series of "Cinderella Man" stories about him in a fine spirit of ridicule, while both are falling in love. That situation never has failed. In Mr. Capra's able hands, and with Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur, Lionel Stander and Douglas Dumbrille playing the leading roles, it takes on new importance as a source of humor, romance, thrills and suspense.

This will be coming along to the screen of the Earle Theater the day following the opening of "Rhodes" at the Metropolitan. It will be found full entertainment value for anybody's time and money, or else all signs at yesterday afternoon's preview for the drama desks were as bogus as the pretensions of Mr. Deeds' crafty lawyer and our personal judgment as full of errors as this spring's official weather forecasts!

Speaking of film bills, present and prospective, there is a new feature on at the Belasco to supplant the Easter revival of "Alice in Wonderland." Beginning with last night's preview at 10:17 o'clock, the chief attraction at the Belasco became "The Smiling Lieutenant," in which Maurice Chevalier—not seen on a local screen for a long time now, by the way—appears in the title role, with Claudette Colbert and Miriam Hopkins in the principal feminine parts. It is being shown on the regular daily schedule beginning this morning.

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, April 13.

Pat O'Brien and Margaret Lindsay are getting ready to play a scene for the flicker "Public Enemy's Wife." The set is a cabin in Florida, and O'Brien, a G-Man, is relaxing on a couch and Margaret Lindsay shouts to him from the next room.

PAT O'BRIEN.

Director Nick Grinde has O'Brien and Lindsay rehearse the scene several times, but it is mainly for the cameraman. He swings his camera around to see that he has the players. Another cameraman is concerned about the lights. These technical rehearsals continue for many minutes. Director Grinde sees me and asks if everything is all right. We speak about trivial things. Then I ack Director Grinde when he is going to shoot the scene, as I'm waiting to get a set yarn.

Director Grinde summons O'Brien and Lindsay for action, saying: "We can't keep the press waiting. This is part of his work, so let's shoot the scene." And they do.

The dog, Lightning, is playing a scene for his flicker, "White Fang." Director David Butler states he is ready and Lightning's trainer signals the dog to pull the sled over the studio snow.

Lightning has a stand-in. Other dogs in this picture have to be wired to stand in a certain position. They jump the lights, the camera and the commands are new to them. Lightning behaves like a trouper. They tried to bleach Lightning to make him white. They didn't realize that the White Fang referred to the flashing fangs and not to the color of the dog.

Director Van Dyke sits in his chair, which is made of skins from his Eskimo expedition. He is now directing the flicker "San Francisco," and Jeanette MacDonald has entered the Paradise Club, looking for a job. The night club is crowded with extras dressed in the costumes of the period. Director Van Dyke has the mike for the public address system in his hand. He speaks softly, giving his commands. He asks for quiet. Then he instructs Miss MacDonald. He tells her how to walk onto the set, and to look about the club while she is talking to the man.

"All right, honey," he says to Miss MacDonald, "we'll try it." Suddenly he shouts to the extras, who aren't in this particular shot: "Boys, get all set. Say everything you've got to say. When you're ready let me know and I'll shoot the scene."

They catch wise fast. Director Van Dyke gets the silence he wants. "All right, honey, we'll do it." Director Van Dyke sits back, as if he were the audience, and watches the show.

Luise Rainer walks out of her dressing room. It is the day after "The Great Ziegfeld" has opened on Broadway. Rainer has on part of her Chinese make-up and is vastly different from the glamorous Anna Held.

She is waiting to play a scene in the flicker "The Good Earth." She tells me that she has been waiting to play a scene since 8 o'clock in the morning. It is now late in the afternoon. She has been crying. "The Good Earth" troupe has been out on location, and Rainer was told to be at the studio, ready, for the company was expected back. She sat all day in the dressing room, waiting—and crying. Often a messenger arrived with a telegram from New York, complimenting her for her great performance. Broadway was singing her praises—and Rainer was sitting alone in a room, waiting and crying.

Jean Harlow and Franchot Tone are playing a scene for the flicker "Suzy." The locale is Paris in the year 1914, and Harlow is a chorus girl stranded in that city. She is now standing in Franchot Tone's bedroom, attired in a pair of men's pajamas which are too large for her. Tone is in the next room. The censors supply even stranded chorines with morals. Harlow shouts: "Where's your comb? Tone, from the next room, shouts back: "In the top drawer." Harlow opens that drawer, discovers a bank book and gazes at it fondly.

That is all there is to that particular scene. Director George Fitzmaurice is now ready to take it. He says: "Okay, Jean. Let's make history." Jean smiles and answers: "A statuette on this, eh?" Their particular brand of joshing is over. The set is quiet. The camera turns.

Opposing Leaders in Drama of Africa

Reviewing Stand.

With Gary Cooper and Jane Cooper at the Paramount Theater, on Broadway, it seems like Old Home Week to this reporter . . . Both of them appeared with me on that stage Thanksgiving Week, 1933, my first week in vaudeville, for Jane Cooper was then in the dancing act of the Lathrop Brothers, and Gary Cooper was hovering around the theater, as he followed us in for a week of personal appearances . . . Mister Cooper, this week, is not as nervous and fidgety as he was on that last occasion, although he is on the screen making passes at Marlene Dietrich in "Desire," a grand flicker . . . Jane Cooper, dancing star of George White's "Scandals," proves this week that she is even a greater screen bet than when she first excited this column's raves a year and a half back . . . Her tap dancing never needed any improvement, and she's pretty as a picture.

GARY COOPER.

Chuckle in the "Jumbo" ads . . . The newspaper advertisements read: "Nights—Lady Free with one paid admission; matinees and nights—Child Free accompanied by adults" . . . Hecklers, however, write in that they went to the theater, paid an admission and did not get a lady free.

• • • •

Frank Buck, the big jungle man, fits in smoothly in the New York social picture, far from the safaris . . . His powerful frame looks entriely comfortable in an effete dinner jacket . . . He, Grant Rice and Courtney Riley Cooper are collabbing on a story for Paramount that will relieve him of the necessity to bring 'em back alive from the jungles . . . Two of the most hilarious incidents of the musical comedy season are built on spoofery of the interpretive dancers . . . Fanny Brice's "Rewolt" dance in the "Follies" is Exhibit A . . . "On Your Toes," the Rodgers-Hart smash hit, devotes itself completely to the topic, and Hoofer Ray Bolger emerges with new honors.

• • • •

Little Jack Little's impression of Bandleader Eddy Duchin is amusing . . . The only one who ever has copied Duchin's habit of turning to the audience with an ivory smile . . . But Little expands the smile into a glassy and fatuous smirk that is mirth-provoking . . . Energy of Gus Edwards is astonishing . . . The veteran star-gazer turns up now on Broadway with a "Sho-Window," a clever vaude revue . . . The audience liked best Joe Dorris, who did a grand imitation of Ray Bolger . . . Dorris is from New York's famous Tenth Avenue . . . In the old days, it was called "Double Fifth" . . . Too bad that Gus Edwards, the original talent discoverer, didn't hit on the idea that jumped Major Bowes into the 70 per cent income brackets . . . That would have been poetic justice.

• • • •

Two greatest actresses on the Broadway stage are Katharine Cornell and Helen Hayes . . . Wonder if Brian Aherne, who has been the leading man for both, ever will break down and express an opinion as to which is the greater . . . Stage, the mag, might get a great yarn from him . . . Easter Week, lushest of the theatrical year, has jammed Broadway theaters as they've rarely been jammed before . . . Broadway legit houses and moving picture cathedrals will collect $750,000 in seven days, in cash, and that is a lot of money.

• • • •

I'm the only one in town who thinks so, probably because everybody is raving over Luise Rainer's performance in "The Great Ziegfeld" . . . But it seems to this observer that the Rainer lass is guilty of over-acting . . . I liked her much better in "Escapade"—but in the words of the Gershwin song, it ain't necessarily so . . . Add Curios: Margie King, cute queen, dancing with Henry King . . . Note you chorines: you can get jobs at the Alvin Theater today at Ben Marden's chorus call for the Spring Riviera show.

• • • •

Financial pages declare that the humble soy bean will be the next big dividend earner . . . One of the largest owners is Countess Dorothy di Frasso . . . For the rich they sing . . . Ernie Holst, El Morocco band leader, started out in Vincent Lopez' crew at the old Casa Lopez . . . It was the erection of the Casa Lopez that split up Lopez and his patron, the hotel man Statler, owner of the Pennsylvania chain . . . Had Vincent stayed with Statler, it is entirely possible that the childless multimillionaire would have adopted him, for he idolized the stocky little band leader . . . Mr. Statler did adopt four children, two of whim have since died.

• • • •

For the past 30 years, Dan Healy has been arranging and organizing affairs for other people, and appearing in them . . . I dare say that in his time, Healy has played more benefits than you can shake a stick at . . . So on Sunday night, May 17, at the Majestic Theater, a crowd of us are going to turn the tables, and observe Dan's thirtieth anniversary on Broadway with the gol-darndest theater party this village ever has seen . . . George M. Cohan, Paul Whiteman, Fred Waring, Capt. George Dutton, of the New York State Troopers; Benny Fields, Jack Benny, Jack Dempsey, Marvin H. Schenck, Jim Brown, Joe Ryan, Pat Rooney, Patsy di Gemma and Jack White are on the committee . . . It should be a memorable shindig.

Brainy?

Denver, April 14 (AP).—Joseph Clyde Reynolds, 60, told police tonight that if boredom hadn't interfered he might have been a great brain surgeon.

"The classroom was too dull," he explained. "It was more fun hiding under beds."

So he is held here as "the pack rat," and Capt. James Childers said he admitted being California's "barefoot burglar."

"My feet are more sensitive than my brain," he explained.

Childers said Reynolds told him he saved the loot from burglaries to finance his studies at European psychiatric clinics. The officer quoted him:

Griffith Stadium's Stands Bulge With 31,000 Fans Sitting In On Nats' Opening-Game Victory

Wandering Reporter And Secret Service Men Scan Big Crowd

By Bill McCormick.

Pregame panorama.

The hired band is playing "Alone"—in front of 10,000 people. There are that many already in Griffith Stadium, though it is yet more than an hour before the opening day's game between Washington and New York is scheduled to start.

The hired band probably would be playing alone if it weren't for a rule of their union that requires an equal number of their members to be present whenever the Army Band plays at such a function. The Army Band will parade onto the field later for the grand finale of the prologue.

The Nats are on the field. Red Kress bangs a beauty deep into centerfield. Beetle-browed Earl Whitehill, the glum pitcher, chases madly after it. He bangs into the bleacher wall to spear the falling ball. His good left arm bears the brunt of the collision. With nothing between himself and starvation but that soup bone, he rams it into a brick wall to catch a ball that wasn't his business anyway. Every inch a ball player, whether on the mound or fooling around on the field.

Jimmy, the Nats' bat boy is growing up. In another year or two you won't be able to tell him from some of the young players Griff is always digging up. Perhaps he will be one of them.

A radio engineer is wandering around the field with a black box strapped on his back, knapsack fashion. A willowy-looking antenna is sticking up from the black box and the radio engineer is holding a microphone in his hand. He is intoning "1, 2, 3, 4, Woof!", "1, 2, 3, 4, Woof!" into the microphone as he roams about from here to there and back again.

The radio engineer is not crazy, neither is he imitating animals or trying to frighten anyone with his "Woofs." That black box is a portable transmitter, on which a broadcast from the field will be relayed to a regular transmitter later on. The present monkey business is for the purpose of determining from just what parts of the field the transmitter will work satisfactorily.

A group of grim-lipped, steel-eyed huskies, all wearing their right hands in their pockets with the nonchalance of long practice, slither past the Washington dugout to the President's box. The Secret Service men, charged with the grave responsibility of protecting the Chief Executive at all times.

The President's bodyguards pry into sound-recording devices of the battery of cameras aimed at the box decorated with the Presidential flag. They know practically everyone of the men operating these cameras, but no chances may be taken when so valuable a life is at stake.

The Secret Service men scan every face within range of their eyes; indeed, seem to be examining every person in the ball park. Then,

Man in Brown Hat Snags President's Pitch, Keeps Ball

A pudgy little man in a brown hat strolled into the infield yesterday at Griffith Stadium and casually caught the President's opening pitch, to the utter disgust of some two dozen fighting-mad Washington Senators and New York Yankees.

The little guy's name is R. A. Walker. He's a hack or taxi inspector in the Police Department, and he paid for his gleaming-white relic with a couple of unintentional kicks on the shin and a rent in the south side of his pants. But it was well worth the trouble. He said so.

"I have been trying to get one of these balls for ten years," he shouted triumphantly, digging himself out from beneath a pile of Nats and Yankees, "and by golly I finally got it."

Yes, sir; he finally had one, but it almost cost Washington the services of Centerfielder Jake Powell. Somebody stepped on Jake when the mob scrambling for the ball went down in a tangled heap in front of the dugout.

Bluege to Stay At 3d; Linke To Pitch

Hesitating to disturb a winning lineup, Manager Bucky Harris, of the Nats last night announced that the veteran Ossie Bluege will remain at third base throughout the current three-game series with the Yankees, or longer.

Thus Buddy Lewis, sensation of the Nats' spring training campaign, who was benched suddenly by Harris as the opening game approached, will remain out of the lineup in deference to Bluege's greater experience and reliability.

"I still regard Lewis as the Washington Club's third baseman, but the pressure of this opening series is not fair to a lad so young," said Harris. "We are lucky to have a man like Bluege available and until we need more hitting strength, we will keep Lewis on the bench. We are taking our time with Lewis."

Bluege Serves Well.

Despite two errant throws, one of which almost put Buck Newsom out of yesterday's game, Bluege served the Nats well yesterday, particularly in the third inning when, with the bases full, he took Chapman's sizzling smash toward third base and transformed it into an inning-ending force-play at second.

Coincidentally Harris announced that he will entrust Ed Linke with the Nats' pitching duties against the Yankees today. Linke is expected to meet up with Red Ruffing as his pitching opponent.

Originally Earl Whitehill was scheduled to face the Yankees today, but Whitehill is being reserved for tomorrow's game to permit full recovery of a finger on his pitching hand, injured in last week's game against Albany.

Returns to Mound After Blow on Jaw to Hold Yanks to 4 Hits.

abaft the Washington dugout, doffed his hat and applauded vigorously the gameness of the big pitcher. And Newsom was not above stealing a look at the President and summoning a wan smile.

Back to the mound he went, that big mountaineer who, by his irrepressible color, his penchant for getting hurt and his swell pitching has captured the imagination of Washington fandom. And it was a superb job that he did.

Gives 1 Hit in 5 Innings.

For five innings the only hit he permitted the Yanks was that bunt that had brought him his woe, which had generously been scored as a hit. Only one of those four hits he gave the Yanks was an honest affair into the outfield—Tony Lazzeri's single in the seventh inning. The other three were scratchy infield blows, and so helpless were the Yanks against Newsom's fast ball that Washington outfielders received only two chances.

But it was not all pitch-and-skittles for Newsom. He was in trouble in the late innings—plenty of it—but always he was able to summon the speed that dealt death to the Yankees' hopes. In the fifth, the sixth and the seventh, the Yankees had runners in scoring position with only one out—the bases were full in the sixth—but with each rise and dip of Newsom's big right arm he was impelling the Yankees toward a shutout.

Dizzy Batted Out as Cubs Win, 12-7

St. Louis, April 14 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs, with a vicious batting attack that netted five home runs and drove Dizzy Dean from the box, walloped the St. Louis Cardinals, 12 to 7, in today's inaugural National League game here.

Diz had to quit in the sixth. Bill McGee, who took his place, failed to stop the Cubs in the seventh. They counted three more runs. Hack and Jurges singled, Hack scoring as Warneke was thrown out and Jurges crossing ahead of Herman, who belted a home run—his fifth hit—into the rightfield pavilion.

Newsom Makes Yanks Eat Pre-Game Razzing

Red Sox Pack Punch, Rout A's, 9 to 4

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 14.—Boston's high-priced Red Sox offset wobbly pitching and ragged fielding with lusty slugging today to gain a 9-4 opening-day triumph over the Philadeelphia Athletics before an official crowd of 29,100.

The A's, raided by Tom Yawkey to make the Sox pennant contenders, used four pitchers. They were belted for a total of 13 hits, including a triple, double and single by Jimmy Foxx.

Wes Ferrell, who turned in 25 victories last year, started the season for the Red Sox. He was in trouble almost every inning, the A's working him for 10 hits and six passes. He managed, however, to climb out of every hole that was not deepened by the infield miscues of Manager Joe Cronin and Eric McNair. Each had two errors.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

"What for? Buck can't hurt nobody," fat Joe McCarthy, the Yankees' manager yelled, ducking one of Buck Newsom's warm-up pitches as he scampered over to President Roosevelt's box just before the start of yesterday's ball game.

"Buck can't hurt nobody," echoed the Yankee team lined up before the Presidential box. "Buck can't pitch. Buck's a fathead. He's a bum, he's a semipro. He's lucky," the vituperous tirade continued. "Yeah, lucky to be in the league."

Buck swallowed hard and grinned. McCarthy puffed up the ramp to the President's flag-bedecked perch and smiled handsomely for the photographers. Newsom just went on lobbing an easy straight ball into Walter Millies' glove. He swallowed some more and mumbled some uncomplimentary remark about the Yankees.

Newsom Followed.

A couple of fleeting seconds later he was almost knocked down in the mad scramble for the inshoot Mr. Roosevelt aimed at the small army of ball players standing before him. They elbowed him this way and that until finally he retired to the dugout in disgust. So this is how a pitcher—a pretty good pitcher, too—fared on opening day. he must have been thinking.

Two and a half hours later the President and 31,000 wild-eyed fans arose in a body and gave Newsom the most tumultuous ovation any Washington pitcher has received since old Walter Johnson won the curtain-raiser for the first of his 31 victories. Carl Reynolds had just doubled Cecil Travis home with the one and winning run of the game. Newsom had shut out Mr. McCarthy's yapping Yankees, 1 to 0.

Blow in Face.

But that isn't the real story behind Buck's triumph. The real meat of this yarn is that he came back after almost being decapitated by Ossie Bluege's peg in the fourth inning, to retire the side, with two men on base and hold the invaders hitless over the rest of the distance.

Briefly, the play was this: Tony Lazzeri opened the seventh with a single and Crosetti followed with a slow roller toward Ossie Bluege at third. Bluege came in fast, scooped up the ball and without bothering to look fired it toward first. Newsom happened to be standing directly in its path and the ball struck him on the neck just back of the right ear.

You could have heard the fat gent in Row 17, Section O, breathe, the crowd was so quiet. A funereal atmosphere enveloped the entire stadium like a pall as Buck clapped

Rowe Superb As Detroit Wins, 3-0

Cleveland, Ohio, April 14.—Lynwood Rowe, the tall Arkansas school boy, put the Detroit Tigers on the road to their third straight pennant when he pitched the Cleveland Indians into submission before 18,200 opening day fans here today, 3 to 0.

Harder blanked the Tigers then until the sixth, when Simmons dropped a double on the right field line, sprinted to third on Goose Goslin's fly and scored when Pete Fox drove a hard-hit single to left.

Jones Rides Zay to Victory in Feature Sprint at Graw

'Electric Eye' Used in 2d Event

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace Race Track, April 14.—Zay, short on name and long on courage, stuck to her running guns long enough to take The Belair Stakes, the day's outstanding race at this plant. The under-sized daughter of Campfire, with the aid of Jockey Bobby Jones' whip, refused to yield even to Good Gamble, highly-touted representative of the Vanderbilt Stable. There was no need for a photo to decide the finish although it was no more than a head. Another length away came a tiring Paraguay Tea, paying the penalty of setting a brisk pace.

It was to the tune of a $23.60 mutuel that Zay made good for her backers. The Vanderbilt pair, with accent on Good Gamble, had drawn the bulk of the betting money and it kept intact the record of odds-on favorites by taking a licking at 7 to 10.

Zay, owned by Mrs. R. H. Geighe, was credited with running the six furlongs in 1:13 1-5, creditable time over a track drying out.

Ideal racing weather and the yen of nearby Pennsylvanians for the turf served to bring out a crowd of 8,000.

Daily double stock fell off to a mere $29 with the important first and third races going to Jackie D and Deflate.

Jones Worthy of Praise.

Whenever the feature race is mentioned, Jockey Jones is worthy of high praise. Zay broke on top, but Jones refused to have his mount lured into highest speed by the ambitions of Bobby Merritt, who rode Paraguay Tea. The latter went sailing to the front while Jones took a notch on the reins to await the stretch run. Good Gamble, in the meanwhile, failed to get through on the inside and was taken wide for racing room. This move probably cost the Vanderbilt horse the verdict, for Zay, when put to a drive, just managed to stave off the closing rush of Good Gamble.

After yesterday's parade of the long shots, a favorite finally broke the ice when Jackie D came through with a victory in the opening race. The Sweep All colt followed the pace of Cosette, and when the latter went wide entering the stretch, Jackie D took command. Cosette finished second, far ahead of Cathy P. The winner, capably handled by Jockey Harry Richards, paid $3.70.

The "electric eye" had to give the verdict on the place and show horses in the second race, marking the first time the camera finish has been consulted in Maryland. There was no doubt as to Alit's winning, but Taunton, Snobby Scamp, Parva Stella and Wandrel finished almost as a team. The sign "photo finish" was displayed on the mutuel board and the crowd was quiet while the judges studied the picture. They finally decided that Taunton was second, Snobby Scamp third and Parva Stella fourth. Hardly a murmur went up when the numbers were displayed.

It was a rough and tumble race in which Alit, the smallest horse in the race, escaped interference by running on the outside and came through with a stretch punch that left no argument as to the winner. Alit, expertly handled by Ira Hanford, paid a $15 mutuel. Among those which met interference were Taunton, Petee Blue and In Front.

Eddie Smith, the Washington jockey, rode J. P. Jones' Deflate to victory in the third race. The Meridian filly had a length margin over Aroused after setting the pace virtually from the start. Prevention, of the Vanderbilt entry, was third in the field of eight. Deflate helped pad the bankrolls of the lucky customers to the extent of a $9.70 mutuel.

The Liberty Lane Stable's Idle Along, capably handled by Jockey J. Rosen, scored a length victory over Jane D in the fifth race at a mile and seventy yards. Sparky was third in the field of seven. Idle Along went to the front under hustling tactics, was steadied along until swinging into the stretch where she answered a drive to hold Jane D safe. Sparky made up some ground in the closing stages. The winner paid 10.10.

Fogarty, owned by the Ascot Stable, answered a drive by Jockey G. Smith to win the sixth race. E. A. Smith's Repeal was second and R. C. Utz's Dearzin was third over the 1 1-16-mile course. Fogarty, outrun for six furlongs, moved around the leaders entering the stretch and was going away at the end. Dalmatia was used setting the early pace. Fogarty paid a $20.10 mutuel.

Eudes, at a $14.80 mutuel, took the day's finale with the greatest of ease from Three Daggers and Night Ray.

Dear Al:

Well, friends, Zay. What do you say? Finally put one over at a $23.60 mutuel. And we picked the feature race for the spot. Maybe this means the start of better things for Benningites. Did I hear somebody say that it's about time? A winner or two here is enough to give one the heebie jeebies. For a while it looked as if the boys in the press box would have to go down to the judges and see if they could pick a winner off the photographic finishes. Is it any wonder that a long shot sends me into the back-slapping department? After putting Zay across, I believe I could pick a wad of cotton out of a coal bin. Clocker Mike deserves an assist. He was in excellent rooting form. So loud did he yell that some of his words are likely to be found in the foot notes of the chart on the race. We started the day with Jackie D. and ended it with Edues. BILL.

First race—Malispina, winner of two races at Bowie, should come back with another victory in this field. Pass 'Em By showed keen speed before bolting to the fence in his early outing and with that education probably will run an improved race. Ejector ran wide all the way the other day.

Second race—Epitaph seems to have located the right field in this and should have little trouble taking the chief award. Minton will like the track and is dangerous. Golden Sceptre for the show.

Third race—Dowdy Dell might have won his last at Bowie but for being shuffled back at the break. Fares better in this company. Some Good looms as theone to beat. Peter Pumpkin to take care of the others.

Fourth race—The Vanderbilt entry of Speed to Spare, Postage Due, Winter Sport and Identity seems to have a strong grip on this purse. Wise Prince, a surprise winner at Bowie, will do a lot of running here. Broker's Tip cannot be counted out.

Sixth race — Kapena was rushed too much here opening day and stopped. A rating ride tomorrow may bring a set of brackets. Jamul and Prince Pettie figure close to the top one.

Seventh race—Dutch Uncle ran well in California and may run his race tomorrow. I'm going to take a chance and string along. Mad Frump and Ross for the place and show awards.

Best bet—Dowdy Dell.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACKIE D., $3.70, $2.60, $2.30; COSETTE (entry), $4.40, $3.30; CATHY P., $7.50.

JACKIE D. hustled into a contending position early, was blocked when the pacemaker swerved to the inside midway of the homestretch, came to the outside after being eased back and closed with a rush to get up in the last few strides. COSETTE displayed nice speed to move into a clear lead, swerved out at the turn into the homestretch, blocked the winner midway of the homestretch when swerving to the inside, then faltered approaching the finish. CATHY P. easily held away over the others, but could not threaten the first two. SLUMP was hard ridden all the way. CAPT. YARBROUGH went evenly. GOLD BAND raced green and dropped back badly after the start. SILVER PALM went with slight interference at the turn out of the backstretch. SUNCRAX broke very slow after acting unruly at the post.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward (foaled in Maryland). Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:11. Off at 3:12½. Winner, G. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALIT, $15.00, $8.30, $5.50; TAUNTON, $7.90, $7.00; SNOBBY SCAMP, $29.00.

ALIT, hustled into a forward position, swung to the outside when reaching the homestretch, responded to punishment and finishing fast was up in the last 20 yards. TAUNTON, slower than usual to settle in his stride, circled around his field in the last five-sixteenths and finished with a bold rush on the outside. SNOBBY SCAMP, hurried along for the entire trip, finished in determined fashion after being straightened into the homestretch. PARVA STELLA moved into the lead shortly after the start, showed good speed, and held on well when the real test came. IN FRONT was rushed hard to gain a forward position, suffered interference at the turn, drove through on the inside to reach the winner, but tired during the closing sixteenth.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:50. Off at 3:53½. Winner, J. P. Jones' ch. c. (3), by Meridian—Ha'Penny. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEFLATE, $9.70, $4.40, $3.00; AROUSED, $5.30, $2.80; PREVENTION (entry), $2.60.

DEFLATE took command shortly after the start, went along smoothly to open up a clear lead when reaching the homestretch, saved ground, but had to be shaken up to withstand AROUSED. Latter closed in determined fashion in the persuit of the winner from the beginning, rallied to punishment, and was gaining willingly at the close. PREVENTION raced in the first flight all the way and held on gamely in the closing drive. EXALTATION was strongly ridden all the way, but could not menace the leaders. SON OF TROY broke well, but lacked speed enough to offer contention. SWEET GUINEA finished stoutly after trailing her field. CINAR raced in dull fashion. BORSA was done after a half-mile.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Belair. For 3-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:32½. Winner, H. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZAY, $23.60, $6.90, $3.90; GOOD GAMBLE (entry), $2.90, $2.30; PARAGUAY TEA, $3.80.

ZAY, away nicely and rated in near attendance of PARAGUAY TEA, responded readily when shaken up for the final drive, displaced the pacemaker in the closing furlong and had enough in reserve to withstand GOOD GAMBLE. Latter, taken under mild restraint the early running, swung to the outside when put to a drive and was wearing the winner down steadily approaching the finish. PARAGUAY TEA displayed nice speed while setting the pace, saved ground and held on with good energy when forced to a hard drive. PRETTY NIGHT raced on the outside for the entire trip and closed stoutly after losing considerable ground. MAXINE F. was gaining steadily after being outrun for the first five furlongs. BIRD FLOWER could not reach the leaders. PATSY BEGONE began tiring after five furlongs. SPRINGLOCK was never a factor.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:56. Off at 4:57½. Winner, Liberty Lane Stable's ch. f. (5), by Happy Arse—Idleness. Trained by W. E. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IDLE ALONG, $10.10, $5.00, $3.30; JANE D., $3.80, $2.80; SPARKY, $3.70.

IDLE ALONG outran her field into the backstretch, was rated along under slight urging in the early stages, held strong efforts from JANE D. and outfinished the latter when the real test came. JANE D., a keen factor from the beginning, repeated efforts in the last half-mile, but weakened during the final drive. SPARKY worked her way into contention when reaching the final turn, came to the outside and finished courageously. AMERICAN BELLE was in close attendance of the leaders for six furlongs, but tired thereafter. PEPPERY raced evenly and should improve. TIEMPO raced in spots. FLYING DERE was unable to reach a forward position.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:25. Off at 5:27. Winner, A. Scott Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—POGARTY, $20.10, $7.80, $4.20; REPEAL, $3.60, $2.70; DEARZIN, $5.10.

POGARTY, reserved off the pace until well settled in his stride, moved into contention when reaching the final turn, swung to the outside when engaging the leader, finished fast and came away after gaining command inside the closing furlong. REPEAL followed the leaders closely in the early running, took a slight lead in the last five-sixteenths, but could not withstand the winner under a hard drive. DEARZIN, a strong factor all the way, saved ground in the late stages, but faltered in the last quarter-mile. DALMATIA was hurried into a clear lead going into the backstretch, but failed to stay when challenged. BENDER FIRST could not reach a forward position. SUN ABBOT went well placed, but was not good enough when shaken up. OUR SHIP and MONEDY were outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:56. Off at 6:01. Winner, William Ryan's ch. h. Georgetown U. Staves Off Tarheel Nine's Late Rally to Win, 7-5.

Bassin Leads Hilltoppers' Attack

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 14.—North Carolina University's baseballers came back strong the ninth inning here today in its game with Georgetown, but, unable to overcome the Hoyas' lead, gave the visitors a well-earned 7-5 victory.

The Tarheels filled the bases in the last of the ninth, scoring one man, and then filled the sacks again, but the winning runs remained on the paths as Relief Pitcher Nicketakis squeezed out of the hole.

Tony Barabas, however, was the pitcher who checked the Tarheels. Carolina opened strong, tallying four times in the first two innings but Barabas took the mound for the Hoyas and kept them well in hand, aided by two opportune double plays.

Bullard, Strayhorn and McCarn topped the Carolina hitters, each getting a pair of hits. Bassin was the big noise in the 12-hit attack of the Georgetown players, getting three for four. Sheeran poled a home run in the ninth. Third Baseman Cavedine was the fielding star, taking 14 chances and making one miscue.

Carolina scored twice in the first on two bases on balls and hits by McCarn and Shapiro. Again in the second the Tarheels combined an error and two hits for another pair of runs.

But this lead was annulled when the Georgetown team converted five hits into four runs. Cavedine's double featured this rally.

Georgetown went into the lead in the fifth when K. Nau doubled and scored on Bassin's single. Interference by Carolina's catcher, Strayhorn, enabled the Hoyas to score another in the sixth, while Sheeran's homer in the ninth completed the scoring.

Episcopal High Nine Defeats Trainers, 15-5

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., April 14.—Episcopal High School's baseball team opened its season this afternoon on Hoxton Field, by pounding out a 15-to-5 victory over National Training School. The game was limited to five innings by agreement.

Pollard and Peele divided the pitching for the winners and limited the Training School to four hits. The Maroons collected only eight hits off the slants of Guy and Mailey, but very loose fielding by the visitors was responsible for their downfall.

both hands to his tormented head. He rocked his head between his huge paws in unconcealed agony. He ran around like a decapitated chicken. He was in agony. He was like a wobbly heavyweight trying to shake off a knockout punch. He didn't go down. He was out on his feet.

"Shucks, 'twarn't anything," he said after the game, discussing his victory. "I kin beat them punks anytime I want to. I'l like to pitch again tomorrow—I'd shut 'em out again."

Brown to Fight Leroy Haynes Tonight

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 14.—Headline happenings will flash before the ringsiders' eyes when Leroy Haynes and Natie Brown go to gunning in the arena ring tomorrow night. One proud record must go by the boards when the ten rounds are fought—or perhaps before they have gone that far.

Haynes, newest colored heavyweight sensation, will hurl his sharpest blows at Brown, originally a Philadelphia lad, but now fighting out of Washington. Regardless of what takes place, there's a big bang in store.

In his last five bouts, Haynes has knocked out five men—the most recent victim was Primo Carnera. The Philadelphia Negro required only 6 minutes and 53 seconds to finish the giant. And the famed Joe Louis needed six rounds to perform the same feat.

On the other hand, Brown has baffled the boss punchers in the heavyweight field. He went 10 rounds with Louis last spring; he was the last man to shed the Bomber's fists. After he held the Dark Detroiter at bay, Carnera, King Levinsky, Max Baer, Paulino Uzcudun and Charley Retzlaff sank under that withering fire.

Haynes will either knock out Brown—or lose the razor edge of his newly-gained prominence. A victory here would be merely incidental. He must score the hard way—with a kayo shot—if he's to move nearer to the top flight. And Brown is known as the current "spoiler" among the big sluggers.

Mt. Rainier Nine Loses Use of Playing Field

A decision of grave concern to to baseball in Mount Rainier, Md., and vicinity, was handed down yesterday by the school board of Prince Georges County. The Mount Rainier High athletic field, long a subject of controversy between the Mount Rainier Grays and the Prince Georges A. C., was thrown open to the Grays alone.

This very much irritated the Prince Georges A. C. (alias Griffith Consumers, alias Colmar Manor A. C.) and there is some agitation this morning in Mount Rainier over the whole matter. It seems the Grays and the Prince Georges A. C. (alias Griffith Consumers, alias Colmar Manor A. C.) have been having quite a squabble about the diamond for a year or so.

At one point the dispute was carried to the town council of Mount Rainier, which, however, was unable to render a decision.

Record Throng Sees Giants Triumph

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 14.—The Giants and Dodgers blasted the lid off another baseball season today with the New Yorkers coming from the rear to rout their Flatbush cousins, 8 to 5, before the largest opening day crowd the Polo Grounds has seen in at least ten years.

The official attendance was 55,590 with 54,392 paid and the colorful assembly included many celebrities, among them Mayor LaGuardia, Babe Ruth, the old home run king of the Yankees, and former Mayor James J. Walker.

2 Youths Steal Show in Golf Play Here

Leapley, Murphy Upset Veterans in Rock Creek Tourney.

By Dave Herman.

A couple of Central High School striplings, Bill Leapley, 15, and Julian Murphy, 16, were the show stealers in the opening round of the Rock Creek Spring golf tournament yesterday.

Little Bill provided the biggest upset of the day by eliminating the veteran Eddie Stolark on the nineteenth hole, while Little Julian played 13 holes in even par to overwhelm J. Ticehurst, 7 and 5.

On the strength of their first round performances, the high school youths are going to be tough to beat.

Stolark sank a 50-footer for a deuce on the seventeenth to go one up on Leapley, but the youngster squared the battle with a par four on the home hole. On the nineteenth Leapley carved out his par, while Stolark's best was a five. Leapley shot a 75.

Bob Leapley, older brother of Bill, shot the first nine in 34, one over par, and barely survived a second nine rally by bespectacled Pat Axtell to win, 3 and 1.

Other winners were Andy (Chubby) Oliveri, District junior municipal champion, who conquered R. W. Phillips, 4 and 2, and Bob Elian, victor over Ray Turner, 2 and 1.

This morning's feature match will be between Williams and Leapley, who meet at 10:20.

Owen Is Named District Ring Official

Maj. Brown Will Head Commission; Group Is Representative.

As exclusively announced in The Washington Post last week, Claude W. Owen, prominent local business man, yesterday was formally appointed to the District Boxing Commission to succeed Chairman Fred Buchholz, whose resignation will take effect April 24.

Major Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police and the senior member of the commission, will be elected to the chairmanship of the governing body of boxing at the next meeting following the induction into office of Owen.

The new set up is considered ideal by those close to the situation. It will find a member of the police force—Major Brown—a business man—Owen—and a lawyer—Kenneth Parkinson—controlling boxing in the Nation's Capital.

Major Brown Declined.

Major Brown was offered the chairmanship of the commission some time ago, but declined at that time, feeling it would require too much of his time away from his police duties. Now such a smooth-working organization has grown up in the commission that Major Brown feels he can accept the chairmanship, which will be voted to him.

Mr. Owen is president of the E. G. Schaefer Co., a wholesale plumbing supply company. A former president of the Board of Trade, he has been active in Washington business and civic circles since he came here in 1914. The new commissioner was born in Gaithersburg, Md., March 2, 1886, and educated at St. John's College, Annapolis George Washington and Georgetown universities.

Mount Rainier High's baseball team will open a 12-game schedule today, with the National Training School team on the latter's field at 2:30. The Mounts will be trying to make a creditable showing, although they have had no practice for over a week because of Easter vacation.

Coach Perry Wilkinson has practically decided upon the following line-up for the opening game: George Taylor, catcher; Harold Brown, first base; Kenneth Easton or Harry Wynn, second base; Tillie Scott, shortstop; Steve Miller, third base; Leo Baldwin, leftfield; Frank Landolt, centerfield, and James MacGregor or James Miller, centerfield. Lawrence Finn, Stephen Ager, Vernon Todd, Donald Adams, Edgar Shinn and Earl Miller will probably all see duty on the mound.

The Mount Rainier schedule:

May 1, Beltsville C. C. C., away; 5, Maryland Park High, home; Devitt Prep, home; 12, National Training School, home; 15, Hyattsville High, away; 26, Laurel High, home; 29, Maryland Park High, away.

Smith, who recently won the Bobby Jones Masters' championship for the second time in three years, will start his golf class at 1:30.

After spending an hour discussing the fundamentals of the game, and showing the kids how to drive, approach and putt, Smith will unreel the latest Bobby Jones movies, which are equipped with sound.

Then later in the afternoon the Missouri pro, who is being sent here by Spalding's, will play in an exhibition with Billy Dettweiler, Georgetown freshman star; Billy Shea, of Western, District schoolboy golf champion, and Buddy Sharkey, of Gonzaga, Georgetown Prep invitation winner.

Ambassador Hirosi Saito and Consul S. Yoshizawa, of the Japanese Embassy, played with Chin and Toda.

Entries for the Phyllis Keeler Memorial tournament will be accepted this morning by Mrs. Charles B. Stewart, 10 Sixth street northeast, Lincoln 3369. The pairings for the first tournament of the season scheduled at Washington Golf and Country Club Friday morning will be announced tomorrow.

40 to Compete In Swim Meet Tonight

An entry list of some 40 swimmers is expected to compete tonight at 8 o'clock in the District A. A. U. meet to be held in the Ambassador pool. The annual District men's and women's low-board diving championships will be at stake in two of the feature events of the night. Two national interscholastic championship swimmers will also compete.

Joe Lyman, former Brown University star and New England intercollegiate diving champion, is favored to take the men's diving title, although Buddy Hodgson, of the Shoreham, promises some stubborn opposition. Lyman is District A. A. U. high-board champion, and Hodgson is runner-up.

The feature swim event promises to be the 220-yard free style, in which Irving McCaffrey, of Massanutten Military Academy, national interscholastic champion for the distance, will face Washington's record holder, young Bob Jordan, of Central High School. Andy Clark, also of Massanutten and runner-up for the national schoolboy title, will give the event a third star. Ernie Boggs, District champion, is also expected to enter.

Grant Defeats Budge to Even Net Series

No. 3 Ranking Star Makes Bid for Davis Cup Singles Team.

By the United Press.

Atlanta, Ga., April 14.—Little Bitsy Grant, Atlanta's bouncing mite of the clay courts, evened his exhibition series with Donald Budge, his Davis Cup teammate, by a 3—6, 6—2, 7—5 victory here today.

Grant, No. 3 ranking amateur, made a major bid for inclusion on the Davis Cup singles team that meets Australia in Philadelphia next month by defeating the sensational red-headed Californian.

The victory evened up an exhibition series, started in Houston between matches in the Davis Cup interzone contests with Mexico.

With Wilmer Allison, No. 1 national ranker, certain to be one member of the Australia-United States singles team, Grant and Budge are the logical contestants for the second position.

In a second exhibition match, Gene Mako, Budge's California running mate, defeated Billy Reese, Atlanta star, 6—2, 6—3, 6—4. A doubles match was not completed when Budge and Mako were forced to catch a train.

The match was marred by loose officiating. Many of the more than 500 spectators felt that a local lineman was not calling the shots accurately.

Building Gains 250 Per Cent Since 1933 Low

First-Quarter Permits Largest for Period Since 1931.

New York, April 14.—Although slightly below the final quarter of last year, the volume of permits for the first quarter of 1936 eclipsed any similar period since 1931, Dun & Bradstreet say today. The aggregate for the first three months of this year totaled $184,637,909, compared with $99,526,487 a year ago, or an increase of 85.5 per cent. Contrast with the $52,705,189 total recorded in the first quarter of 1933, when the building industry was at its lowest, shows a rise of 250 per cent.

The record of building permit values, as compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, for the 215 cities, by groups, for the first quarter of 1936 and 1935, is given herewith:

	Three Months— 1936.	1935.	Change P. C.

Shipbuilding Expands 20% In First Quarter

New York, April 14.—Nearly 20 per cent increase, since the beginning of this year, in the volume of merchant vessel tonnage under construction throughout the world is shown by a statement just issued by Lloyd's Register of Shipping, for the quarter ending March 31 last. Including in the returns are all ships of 100 gross tons and upward, each, which are now being built in all maritime countries, except Russia, from which authetnic reports are not available.

The advance during the last quarter amounted to about 275,000 gross tons, and brings the total of world production to more than 1,800,000 tons. Nearly 100,000 tons of the total gain was acounted for by the shipyards of Great Britain and Ireland, while Germany reported an increase of 62,000 tons, Lloyd's Register points out. For the United States, the advance was 16,000 tons. There were also gains for Japan, Holand and Sweden, while small declines were reported for Denmark and France. Italy reported no change in the volume of work under way in that country.

Comparative Activity.

How production has compared in the last two quarters in Great Britian and Ireland, the United States, and the other maritime countries taken as a group, is shown in the folowing Lloyd's Register table, the figures representing gross tons:

	March 31 1936.	Dec. 31, 1935.
United States	49,760	33,371
Other countries	927,993	766,696
World total	1,820,114	1,543,153

Of the current world production of merchant shipping, Great Britain and Ireland are now building 46.3 per cent, as compared with 48.1 per cent at the end of last year; the United States 2.7 per cent, as against 2.2 per cent, and the other countries collectively 51 per cent, in comparison with 49.7 per cent on December 31, 1935.

$50,000,000 Bills 3 Times Subscribed

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announces that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 273-day Treasury bills, dated April 15, 1936, and maturing January 13, 1937, which were offered on April 10, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

The total amount applied for was $150,991,000, of which $50,008,000 was accepted. The accepted bids ranged in price from 99.932, equivalent to a rate of about 0.090 per cent per annum, to 99.920, equivalent to a rate of about 0.105 per cent per annum, on a bank discount basis.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Stocks and Speculative Bonds Decline in Moderate Trading; Wheat Advances.

New York, April 14.—After a firm opening, the stock market again turned downward, spoiling the expectations for a recovery, but support came into leading issues in enough volume to prevent wide open breaks. Leaders lost 1 to 4 points on the day, and for a short while the trading activity sent the ticker behind on reporting. Afternoon business was slower, leaving prices near the lowest at the close. Speculative bonds also were weak. May wheat closed 1⅛ of a cent higher at 96⅛ cents a bushel.

The current recession in stocks, concealed to some extent, though it has been by advances to new high prices in a few stocks, has been sharp enough to raise fresh doubts as to the position of stocks. If recovery from around these levels takes place, the downward reaction in the face of favorable trade news will be described merely as a "technical" decline, such as inevitably comes in the course of a bull market. If it goes much further talk will be heard that the market is attempting to discount summer slack in business, and perhaps anxiety over the outlook for taxation and the financial position of the Government.

In dropping 1 to 4 points in the early part of today's trading, the railroad stocks canceled the gains of the past three sessions. Losses suffered by industrial stocks were the largest in three weeks, and the steels and motors, on which most hope has been pinned, were the hardest hit. Their declines ranged from 1 to 4 points. Many leading stocks were in that price loss class, including Anaconda, Santa Fe, Northern Pacific, Bethlehem, General Motors, du Pont, Standard of New Jersey, U. S. Rubber, Westinghouse, Western Union, Montgomery Ward, Republic, Sears Roebuck, Southern Pacific, Columbian Carbon and New York Central.

Air Pockets.

Doubtless the fall into air pockets of a number of stocks that recently have flown pretty high has had something to do with the weakness in the general markets. Traders have been less inclined to take risks so long as bids were scarce. Moreover, the dizzy climb of certain other stocks has been far from reassuring, promising as it has a tumble, investigation, and the like.

Two stocks which were weak yesterday—Smith and Auburn—were firmer today, but others, notably Case and Chrysler, lurched heavily. Manville and Westinghouse were decidedly weak. Steel gave up more than 2 points. Corn Products stood virtually alone in the standard industrial class as a stock able to move forward, although Can was steady.

Oil shares sagged a point or so, with Jersey setting a poor example. Motor accessories yielded 1 to 2 points. Silvers softened, but Cerro de Pasco was an exception, going up a point. Coppers lost some of their recent advance.

Banking Position.

Chicago member banks which had sold $232,000,000 of Government securities on April 1 to clients who desired to be long of tax exempt securities and short of taxable cash on that date, when assessments under the Illinois moneyed capital tax law were made, bought back $130,000,000 in the week ended April 8, condition figures of the weekly reporting banks in 101 leading cities disclosed today. For all the banks such Government security holdings increased $148,000,000. The figures also revealed the washing out of some of the first of the month interbank borrowings and rediscounting, a return flow of $19,000,000 into member bank vault cash accounts, minor changes in loans and other investments, and a sharp gain amounting to $186,000,000, in reserves, which suggested that much of the $312,000,000 gain in demand deposits was not employed. Time deposits rose $47,000,000, an unusually large increase, while Government deposits were down $14,000,000. Contributing to the expansion in deposits in the week of April 8, undoubtedly, was the $112,000,000 of net excess of expenditure reported by the Treasury for the period, such expenditure coming from cash and from balances in the Reserve banks.

Holy Roller.

A good old royal squeeze took place again in Gulf Coast lines—known in the stock table as New Orleans, Texas & Mexico, and on the stock ticker tap as NOX. The stock closed at 17, the high for the year, last Saturday. Yesterday it closed at 34, having in one day exactly doubled in price. If that attracted the attention of the investigating authorities at the stock exchange or SEC, no mention was made of the matter, and certainly nothing was done about it, for after a little preliminary skirmishing around 33 this morning, the stock hit 43 at the close. Most of the stock is owned by Missouri Pacific and pledged under bonds, and as the road is in receivership it is difficult to see how the stock exchange could claim that so high a price is synonymous with value. There are only 11,000 shares of the stock floating about. Fact is, with Gulf Coast as with a number of other stocks, the supply available to the public is so small that traders who (if the word dare appear in print) formerly fell under the classification of "manipulators" are taking advantage of the situation to the public loss. Is Gulf Coast stock cornered? If it isn't, what is the answer? Just what is a free and open market?

Choice.

While the Gulf Coast Lines stock is selling around 43, bonds of the same road are selling around 40 cents on the dollar. With a ready explanation for any movement, Wall street decided today that holders of the Missouri Pacific secured 5½s were ready to sell control of the N. O. T. & M. to the Sante Fe because of dissatisfaction with the terms offered in the Missouri Pacific reorganization plan. Frisco used to own the N. O. T. & M.

New Boss.

Wall Street is wondering what sort of man will succeed Mr. Landis as chairman of SEC next summer. The first chairman, Joseph Kennedy, was highly satisfactory to the stock market and it was thought that perhaps he was too friendly to stock traders to suit some of the rabid Wall Street baiters in and around Washington. Mr. Landis, while formerly regarded as an eater of money changers, has proved to be mild enough for anybody, and a thoroughgoing vegetarian. That Wall Street will be able to draw a sympathetic boss for the third time seems somewhat of a long shot, but this is election year, and that accounts for many things. A bad break in the stock market wouldn't do much to restore busines confidence.

Free Markets.

Gulf Coast is not the only stock that is helping to bring wrinkles of worry into the faces of the authorities striving to maintain free markets on the stock exchange. Auburn is already under inquiry. Other stocks that are acting or recently have acted queerly and that may or may not be under investigation are Panhandle preferred and A. O. Smith.

Chemical Sales Expand Despite Buying Policies

Profits of 13 Leading Companies Are 27 Per Cent Over a Year Ago.

New York, April 14.—The trend in chemical sales thus far in 1936 has been gradually upward, despite the early season handicaps of cold weather and the tendency among many users to restrict purchases to a hand-to-mouth basis, according to the Standard Statistics Co., of New York. Prospects for coming months are generally favorable, the indicated sustained activity among such important customers as automobile and steel manufacturers, and expansion of building construction signifying worthwhile improvement in chemical ord.r, as compared with a year ago.

There have been no major changes in prices for mos. items, with the exception of the solvents group. Competition in the latter has forced down posted quotations in recent months by varying amounts, averaging 10 per cent to 15 per cent. As profit margins in most lines depend essentially on volumes, the earnings trend for the majority of chemical companies is definitely upward.

It is estimated that combined profits of 13 leading companies for the first quarter were 27 per cent larger than a year earlier. A similarly favorable comparison is indicated for the second quarter.

Export Copper 9.30, Five-Year Peak

New York, April 14 (AP).—The domestic copper market began operations on a firmly established 9½-cent-a-pound basis today after contending with two sets of quotations for around two months.

Coincident with the new basis for domestic metal, export copper moved to a new high level since 1931, with modest sales reported at 9.30 cents a pound, c. i. f. European base ports.

Piano Industry Gains 31% Over a Year Ago

Chicago, April 14 (AP).—The piano industry has just had the best first quarter business in six years, W. A. Mennie, secretary of the National Piano Manufacturers Association, reported today. Shipments for the first three months were 31 per cent ahead of the corresponding period last year, he said.

March shipments increased 39 per cent over last year, while unfilled orders gained 31 per cent. It was the best showing for March on record. Compared with February, shipments were up approximately 11 per cent.

Oil Output Higher.

Tulsa, Okla., April 14 (AP).—Production of crude oil in the United States for the week ended April 11 showed a gain of 17,482 barrels daily, the Oil and Gas Journal reported today. The daily estimated production was 2,902,130 barrels, as compared to 2,884,648 the previous week.

In New York the pound sterling was unchanged at 4.94¼. This compared with an earlier closing rate for the dollar at London of 4.94⅞ to the pound.

Modest demand for the French franc at New York lifted that unit .00⅛ of a cent to 6.59⅛ cents. Earlier the dollar had closed at Paris at the equivalent of 6.59 cents to the franc.

Italy, Despite War, Buys Less U. S. Cotton

By the Associated Press.

Despite Italy's prolonged war in Ethiopia, the Commerce Department reported yesterday that exports of cotton from the United States to Italy decreased sharply during the eight months ended March 31, as compared with the similar period last year. With increases recorded for most other consumers of American cotton, the report showed that during the eight months ended March 31, Italy received 286,372 bales, as compared with 371,185 bales last year.

Wheat Jumps 21-8 On Crop Havoc

Chicago, April 14 (AP).—Suddenly reversing its price trend, wheat late today soared 2⅛ cents a bushel. Chase Bank Cleared In Damage Action

New York, April 14 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice Samuel I. Rosenman ruled in favor of the Chase National Bank today in a suit brought by 125 persons owning indentures executed by the National Electric Power Co., an Insull utility now in bankruptcy. The plaintiffs had demanded damages of $10,500,000.

The court criticized the bank for the method in which it functioned as a trustee and called the indenture issue "particularly vicious," but cleared the bank of liability.

Banker Sees Inflation With Huge Deficits

New Taxes Would Reveal Federal Costs, Says Orrin G. Wood.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 14.—Orrin G. Wood, of Boston, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, said today inflation is slowly marching down the lane of "Government borrowing due to large unbalanced budgets."

Speaking before the investment bankers at the bankers club, Wood also said, "give no great and unforeseen disturbing event or the long continuance of or increase in unsound Government policies, I look for a continued improvement in the economic process of the country."

"I am not of the school that feels that this country has seen the peak of its prosperity," he said. "Four years of heavy deficits have passed, and each year we have hoped for a definite trend toward a balanced budget. Each year we have been disappointed.

"This coming year, due to a large increase in the ordinary expenses of the Government, due to the invalidation of the processing taxes, and to the bonus, the Federal deficit bids fair to be the largest of the depression by very substantial figures.

"Personally, I should be heartened by the levying of new taxes, provided that those taxes were so distributed as to make our average citizen realize the heavy cost of our present governmental expenditures," Wood declared.

Jersey City, N. J., April 14 (AP).—Alexander Calder, president of Union Bag & Paper Corporation, said at the annual stockholders meeting today, "if Roosevelt is re-elected, we will have the greatest business boom in the history of the country, but I won't say how big a crash we will have after.

"If a Republican is elected we won't have so big a boom, but we also will have less of a crash."

Braden Resigns Manager Post Of Arlington

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Resignation of Roy S. Braden, county manager for Arlington County, effective April 30, was accepted by the county board yesterday.

Board Members Elizabeth B Magruder and Freeland F. Chew did not vote. The motion to accept was made by W. E. A. McShea and supported by Chairman George M. Yeatman and William P. Ames.

In his letter of resignation, which came as a surprise to those attending the meeting, Braden said:

"When I accepted appointment in January, I stated I was pleased to serve in this capacity if there were to be co-operation and harmonious working relationship.

"I find myself in the position now where I am not in accord with the policy that is being adopted by the county board and I am of the very definite opinion that this policy is going to react disastrously to the best interests of our people.

Appointed in 1932.

"There is not only a lack of co-operation among members of the board, but also a very evident lack of any desire to co-operate, and not wishing to be a party to a policy that would be contrary to my ideas of the operation of local government, I am therefore resigning, effective April 30, or the date when the new budget will have been adopted."

Braden was appointed the first county manager of Arlington County in 1932, when the county manager form of government was inaugurated, and was in his fifth yearly term.

Commenting on the resignation, Chew said:

"I sincerely regret the determination of Mr. Braden to tender his resignation, but can readily understand why he should reach such a decision. The county will lose not only a capable and efficient county manager, but the services of a professional engineer and business executive, whose leadership has done much toward making our county a progressive urban community."

As to his future, Braden had no statement to make except to say, "This is not the first time I have taken such a step and each time it has always turned out for the best."

Action Postponed.

C. L. Kinnier, who formerly was with the Virginia State highway department, coming to the county several years ago as its county engineer, is under consideration as Braden's successor, it was learned.

The board postponed action on the offer of Robert W. Gaines to sell the triangle at North Hartford street and Wilson boulevard to the county for $1,000 and to give to the county that portion of North Hartford street included in his holdings plus a 4-foot strip for a sidewalk.

County Manager Braden was instructed to notify T. Coleman Andrews & Co., of Richmond, Va., auditors, that they have again been employed to make the annual audit of county accounts.

On motion of Ames, the board voted to refuse to rezone the property of C. H. Van Hook, located on Wilson boulevard adjoining the Woodrow Wilson School at Fort Myer Heights. The motion also carried the offer that the county school board and county board each pay $1.000 for the property.

The firm of Upman & Adams, architects, of Washington, have been employed to prepare plans and specifications for the remodeling of the courthouse.

County School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp is announced as the principal speaker at the meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Patrick Henry School Friday night. The meeting will be held in the school auditorium at 8 o'clock.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Henry Clay School, Lyon Park, will sponsor an amateur night at the Lyon Park Community House tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. Each contestant will be sponsored by a merchant of Arlington County. Prizes will be offered.

383 Families in County Received Aid in Flood

Hagerstown, Md., April 14.—The Red Cross has aided 383 families of Washington County, who sustained losses in the recent Potomac River flood.

As the work of emergency flood relief in the county nears an end, it was announced that temporary offices occupied by the Red Cross would be closed by tomorrow. The Soil Conservation Department is continuing its rehabilitation work in the flooded areas. About $6,700 contributed here for flood relief has been expended by the Red Cross.

William Evans Is Named Aid To Prosecutor in Montgomery

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Shepherd 2363.

William Wilder Evans, college athlete and youngest member of the Rockville bar, yesterday was appointed assistant to State's Attorney James H. Pugh, of Montgomery County.

Evans has been a member of the Rockville bar for about a year. He graduated from George Washington Law School in 1934 and passed the bar examinations in Washington and Maryland.

Graduated from Maryland University, he attended George Washington University, where he won his law degree. He was a star player in football, basketball and lacrosse.

A native of Chevy Chase, he is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Wilbur E. Evans. He is a member of the Maryland Bar Association, Kappa Alpha fraternity and Omicron Delta Kappa honorary fraternity.

Office Shows Growth.

The appointment was announced by the Montgomery County Commissioners yesterday. Need for an assistant to the State's attorney has been apparent for some time. The office has grown from its part-time status of a few years ago to one of importance.

Because there is no constitutional provision for an assistant, Evans was appointed a clerk by the county commissioners at $1,200 a year and assigned to the office of the State's Attorney. He will assist in the preparation of cases.

Rejecting a recommendation for improving the center of Wisconsin avenue from the District Line to the Old Georgetown road in Bethesda with a parking section, the Montgomery County Civic Federation at a meeting in the Bethesda elementary school recommitted the entire subject matter to its committee on roads, streets and bridges for further study.

The Federation went on record favoring the immediate construction of a bridge over the Potomac River at White's Ferry by adopting a resolution presented by the Rockville Chamber of Commerce.

School Bill Loses.

Another subject that provoked a stormy verbal controversy was a recommendation of the schools committee that bids for the construction of needed new school facilities be awarded wholly on a cost basis but also on a basis of rapid completion to avoid congestion and overcrowding. The proposal was voted down after several delegates branded it as establishing a dangerous precedent.

Establishment of a clinic in the suburban area of the county for the control of social diseases, similar to the clinic now conducted in Rockville, was urged in a resolution adopted upon recommendation of the committee on sanitation and public health.

Collection of dog taxes in Montgomery County has failed to tally with the number of known dogs in the county. The county commissioners yesterday directed the police department to begin a drive on dogs which do not have licenses. The period of grace for dog tags expired April 1 and any dog picked up by police will have to have a license and pay costs before it is returned.

Welfare Conference Called.

Conference of heads of all welfare organizations in the county to avoid overlapping of relief and to plan for as much co-ordination as may be possible under existing State and county laws, was announced yesterday by the county commissioners. The date has not been set.

Dr. J. W. Bird, head of the Montgomery County General Hospital at Sandy Spring, yesterday informed the county commissioners the hospital could no longer accept county patients at the present $2 a day rate. He said the hospital will be forced to charge $3.75 a day, which is more commensurate with the actual cost of caring for the patients. The county commissioners agreed to the new rate.

The Rockville Volunteer Fire Department will hold a special meeting in Rockville tonight, it was announced yesterday by Raymond C. Karge, secretary.

Home Demonstrator Named.

Miss Judith Ault, of Cumberland, Md., has been named assistant county home demonstration agent for Montgomery County. She will divide her time between Montgomery, Frederick and Howard counties, with headquarters in Frederick. Miss Ault will be in Montgomery County this week and will call on the local leaders and members of the homemakers clubs in preparation for the reorganization of the 4-H girls clubs. Miss Ault is a graduate of Hood College at Frederick and was in charge of the Home Service Department of the Potomac Edison Company for five years.

The quarterly membership meeting and fellowship supper of the Rockville Baptist Church will be held this evening in the Sunday School auditorium.

The April meeting of the North Woodside-Montgomery Hill Citizens Association has been postponed until April 24 at 8 p. m. at the home of J. B. Matre, Summerfield road, North Woodside.

Howard Bailey, Washington newspaperman and news commentator, will discuss current events at a meeting of the Woman's Club of Woodside, Md., this afternoon at the home of Mrs. L. M. Christie.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Montgomery Blair Senior High School, Silver Spring, will meet at 8 tonight at the school. Nomination of officers will be held.

Peery Saves 2 Men Sentenced to Die

Richmond, Va., April 14 (AP).—Gov. Peery announced today he had commuted to life sentences the death sentences of William Thaxton and George Ferguson, of Roanoke, Negro murderers, who were to have been electrocuted Friday.

The Governor had received no application for commutation of the death sentence in the case of Thomas Cole Hart, killer of a prison camp guard, whose appeal to the United States Supreme Court was dismissed yesterday.

Ferguson was convicted of killing George Powell and Thaxton of the murder of Lucille Nichols. Though convicted in separate cases, trial of both men took place in September, 1935, in the Roanoke Hustings Court.

Both, originally sentenced to die November 29, 1935, were reprieved on November 26 until February 28, 1936, reprieved again on February 24 until April 17, and the death sentences of both were commuted on April 13.

This story will interest many Men and Women

"Yes, I have come back to where I feel like myself again."

NOT long ago I was like some friends I have...low in spirits... run-down...out of sorts...tired easily and looked terrible. I knew I had no serious organic trouble so I reasoned sensibly...as my experience has since proven...that work, worry, colds and whatnot had just worn me down.

I had been listening to the S.S.S. Radio Program and began to wonder if my trouble was not lowered strength in my blood...I started a course of S.S.S. Tonic Treatment. At the end of ten days I noticed a change... I followed directions faithfully...a tablespoonful before each meal.

The color began to come back to my skin...I felt better...I no longer tired easily and soon I felt that those red-blood-cells were back to so-called fighting strength.

The confidence mother has always had in S.S.S....which is still her stand-by when she feels run-down ...convinced me I ought to try this Treatment...it is great to feel strong again and like my old self.

There is no guess work in the S.S.S. Tonic Treatment...decades of popular acceptance and enthusiastic words of praise by users themselves speak even louder than the scientific appraisal of the progressively improved S.S.S product which has caused millions to say to their friends—"S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."
